UNEMPLOYMENT CLAUSE OF THE ACT IS VALID

Federal Judge At Boston Makes First Ruling On Social Security.

BOSTON. (UP). The unemployment insurance provision of the federal social security act is constitutional, Federal District Judge George C. Sweeney ruled. The ruling came on a petition brought by George P. Davis of Waltham, a stockholder, to restrain the Boston & Maine railroad from making contributions to the federal government in connection with the social security act.

It was the first case in the country to test the constitutionality of the unemployment insurance provision.

Davis has another action pending to prevent the Edison Electric Illuminating company from paying old age benefit taxes.

Judge Sweeney, a former assistant U. S. attorney general and Roosevelt appointee, announced from the bench that the tax was valid, that congress did not exceed its authority in passing the legislation, that the tax was for the general welfare and that it was constitutional.

"The prayer for the injunction is denied and the bill dismissed," Judge Sweeney said.

Edward F. McLennen, counsel for Davis, announced that he would appeal to the U. S. circuit court of appeals and carry the case to the U. S. supreme court if necessary.

When the case was heard, McLennen contended the provision was unconstitutional because:

1. It was not an excise tax on tangibles.
2. It imposed a tax on a certain group and not on others.
3. It violated the "due process" amendment of the federal constitution.
4. It was not for the general welfare.

COMPLAINT AGAINST STEEL

Labor Relations Board Charges Interference.

WASHINGTON. (UP). The national labor relations board issued a complaint against the United States Steel corporation and its subsidiary, the Carnegie Illinois Steel corporation, charging employe attempts at unionization have been "interfered with" in 21 Carnegie Illinois plants. The complaint, which charged "domination and financial support" of the employe representation system established in the mills, notified the steel corporation that a hearing will be held on Dec. 17 at which the board will examine the facts.

REBELS PLANES TAKING PICTURES OF DEFENSES

'Worst Attack' Yet Expected Tuesday—Snow Slows Down Basques.

MADRID. (UP). Rebel planes flew over Madrid taking pictures of government defenses, as the capital, starting its second month of siege, steeled itself for the "worst attack" yet.

The airplanes, sent out by the rebel intelligence service, made no attempt to bomb the city, dropping only a few "flares" which military men said were for the purpose of focusing their aerial cameras.

Both sides, which remained quiet on all fronts thruout the night, prepared for a decisive clash which, it was freely predicted in military circles, would come this week.

One army officer said, "We expect this week to give us the answer to the siege of Madrid. We constantly await the enemy's Irish, German and Italian volunteers."

Snow slowed down the Basque advance from Santander and Bilboa which has taken two government columns within 25 miles of Burgos, the insurgent capital, while other loyalist troops were stalled by bad weather near Miranda, an important bridgehead, on the Ebro river, central point in the government operations against Vitoria.

SUGGEST KING SURRENDER

London Post Says He Should Show Bravery.

LONDON. (AP). The conservative London Post, in a two column editorial, called on King Edward to renounce any intention of marrying Mrs. Wallis Simpson. The Post pointed out this could be the only choice for the monarch and compared the bravery it said he would show with that of his subjects in the World war.

"If the decision may be hard; but is it not simple?" the paper asked. The Post joined with the Daily Mirror, News-Chronicle, and Express in pleading for time so nothing regrettable would be done by either king or cabinet.

PLANNING CHAPEL TRAILER

Catholic Extension Society Looking for One.

CHICAGO. (AP). A streamlined version of the oldtime religious circuit rider appeared as officials of the Catholic church extension society said a priest piloting a chapel-in-a-trailer would set forth next spring on the highways leading to remote parishes.

"We are shopping around among the manufacturers for estimates—the trailer must not cost more than $5,000," said the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Eugene McGinnis, general secretary of the society.

"The priest will be his own driver, and probably his own cook. If he could afford to have a chauffeur, he could afford to have a church. This modern circuit rider will travel to rural areas which have no churches." The trailer would have living quarters for the priest, an altar, and a tent like shelter and folding chairs for the congregation.

ABDICATION NOT THOUGHT OF BY LEO N. SWANSON

Land Commissioner Sitting Tight on His Allegedly Abolished Office.

Abdication of the office of state land commissioner on the strength of an opinion of the attorney general that the office has been vacant since Nov. 3 when the people adopted a constitutional amendment abolishing this $5,000 executive state office was far from the mind of Leo Swanson, holder of the office, whose term will not expire ordinarily until Jan. 7.

Swanson appeared unconcerned Monday after he had been apprised of the opinion given to Gov. Cochran, chairman of the state canvassing board. He attended to his duties as usual, going about the building as legal custodian and reassigning rooms for the legislative reference bureau and performing other duties, in spite of the opinion which holds that his office is vacant, his office funds have lapsed and that his acts since Nov. 3 are null and void.

Gov. Cochran, chairman of the board of canvassers which has not yet canvassed either the vote on state officers, including the vote which re-elected Swanson, and the vote adopting the amendment abolishing his office, was also calm and showed no signs of calling out the militia to oust Swanson, a power which the attorney general by intimation indicated is lodged in him. In fact the governor went to North Platte to attend the annual irrigation convention and upon his arrival there declined to talk further than to say he had not seen the attorney general's opinion. The governor said he probably would not do or say anything until he returned to Lincoln Tuesday.

Secretary of State Swanson said the canvassing board would probably meet Thursday to consider the attorney general's opinion which holds the canvassing board and not the legislature canvasses the vote on amendments to the constitution, altho holding also that regardless of a canvass or proclamation by the governor the land commissioner's office became vacant Nov. 3.

"I intend to sit tight until officially notified my office is va-

CHURCH RAZED BY FIRE

Congregation Saves Furnishings Irvington Building.

IRVINGTON, Neb. (AP). Fire broke out in the Congregational church at old Irvington at noon Sunday while the pastor was pronouncing the benediction at the close of the Sunday school service. Members of the congregation and three fire companies from Omaha fought in vain in near zero weather to save the structure.

As the church filled with smoke, worshippers carried out prayerbooks, pews, the church piano, the pulpit, and even a historic Bible presented to the congregation by the old First Congregational church of Omaha in 1870, four years before the church building was erected. Mrs Ercina Christopherson, first to notice the fire, saved the Bible. The blaze, she reported, apparently started in the chimney.

The structure was insured for $2,500, reported Joseph Noyes, a church trustee. However, he said the loss would exceed that amount.

MARGARETTE LUND DIES.

Margarette Marie Lund, 14, student at Irving junior high school, died Monday noon. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Lund, 1721 Harwood. Besides her parents she leaves two brothers Floyd of Portland, Ore. and Keith at home; sister, Maxine, at home. grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Doettecher of Wymore.

SAYS SWANSON'S OFFICE VACANT SINCE ELECTION

Attorney General Tells Governor to Take Summary Possession.

State Land Commissioner Leo Swanson's office ceased to exist Nov. 3, when electors at the general election voted to adopt a constitutional amendment to abolish his office, regardless of whether the vote be canvassed by the state canvassing board or by the legislature, and his re-election to that position Nov. 3, at the same election, is of no effect.

There is no one to hold the office and all appropriations to pay expenses of the office lapsed Nov. 3 and the governor is charged with the duty of taking charge of all state property and records formerly entrusted to the state land commissioner.

The governor as chief law enforcer, with supreme executive power, authorized by statute to be the legal custodian of property of the state not specifically entrusted to other officers and to take summary possession without process of law, and by the constitution the governor is commander of the military forces of the state and has power to call them out to execute the laws.

These are some of the conclusions arrived at by Atty. Gen. Wright and Asst. Atty. Gen. Murphy in an opinion filed Monday with Gov. Cochran, who had requested them to inquire into the constitutional amendment voted upon at the recent election to abolish the office of commissioner of public lands and buildings.

Questions and Answers.

Questions asked by the governor were in this form.

1. Whether the proceedings for the adoption of the amendment were conducted according to law.
2. Whether it is a canvass by the legislature or by the state canvassing board which ascertains the result of the vote upon the amendment.
3. When said amendment would become effective if lawfully adopted.
4. The operation and effect of the amendment.

The attorney general's answers summarized by him are:

1. The amendment to section 1 of article IV was lawfully adopted and is constitutional.
2. The returns of the vote upon said amendment should be canvassed by the state canvassing board and the result thereof should be proclaimed by the governor within ten days thereafter; but the canvass and proclamation can have no effect upon the adoption of the amendment if in fact sufficient votes were lawfully cast at the election for adoption.
3. There appearing to be no question but what a sufficient number of votes were cast for the adoption of the amendment, it went into effect on Nov. 3, 1936, the date of election.
4. There has been no office of commissioner of public lands and buildings since Nov. 3, 1936; there has not been since that date any such office to be occupied by anyone; and any one going to or into an office at the next election finds himself with no office to occupy. All acts done by any one assuming to occupy such office since Nov. 3, 1936, are void and of no effect. All parts of the constitution and laws of this state in conflict with the amendment are repealed or modified by the provisions of the amended section. The commissioner of public lands and buildings and the employes of his department have not the power to pay the salaries earned or paid from and after Nov. 3, 1936, nor make the appropriation therefor called for under the amendment to the constitution. The governor is charged with the duty of taking charge of all state property and records formerly entrusted to the commissioner of public lands and buildings."

The attorney general finds that a constitutional amendment submitted by the legislature to a vote

NEW DEAL WINS PART VICTORY IN UTILITIES

Supreme Court Holds U. S. Entitled to Delay—Approves FCC Ruling.

WASHINGTON. (UP). The new deal won a partial victory in the first of an important series of cases acted upon by the supreme court—the effort of utility concerns to force the government to trial on an unwanted test of the utilities holding company act.

The court, acting in an appeal brought by the North American company, held that the government was entitled to some delay in the trial of a test of the act sought by the North American concerns.

It did not, however, flatly decide how long this delay might be.

Instead, it sent the North American case back to the lower courts for a redetermination of how long the delay should be.

It held the government entitled to a delay in the North American case at least until a district court ruling is had soon in the government's selected test suit that of the Electric Bond & Share Co. now pending in the New York federal court.

The court approved "original cost" provisions of the federal communications commission's uniform accounting orders for telephone companies which were attacked as "arbitrary" by 44 companies. The orders complained of were issued to cover the method to be used in accounting for property which had been in use in the public service when acquired from another utility.

The methods prescribed were said to be important to assist the communications commission in determining the fair value" of a

MORGENTHAU CHANGES PLAN FOR BORROWING

Proposes to Eliminate What He Calls the 'Chiseling' Investors.

WASHINGTON. (AP). Announcing terms of a $1,486,652,000 financing operation Dec. 15, Secy. Morgenthau revamped treasury borrowing procedure to eliminate "chiselers" he accused of "trying to beat their own government."

Morgenthau shaved interest rates under the comparative lows of recent issues on an offering of bonds and notes to put 300 million dollars of new cash in the government till and meet $1,186,652,000 of maturities. With the exception of two previous government bond issues, Morgenthau said the interest rates were the lowest in history.

In changing borrowing practice Morgenthau eliminated a provision of recent offerings regarding the treasury to "accept all subscriptions of $5,000 or less in full. Altho this was designed to give "the other fellow" a chance to invest in government obligations, Morgenthau told a press conference "that the little fellow has not used it and the big fellow has abused it."

He explained that by placing subscriptions thru other persons, big investors had managed to procure full allotments of securities. Ordinarily, treasury issues are heavily oversubscribed, and investors receive only a certain percentage of the securities they seek to buy. To circumvent this Morgenthau said that certain "chiselers" had split their subscriptions into $5,000 lots and had tendered them thru others. We had one case where a man ran in 21 members of his family," the secretary said. In another case, one bank used all of its clerks. We called up and asked if it was a bonafide offer and they said it was. But in a few days the bonds were back in the market."

He added the treasury had found it "impossible to police" the $5,000 provision and thus was "stiffening its rules." Investors' desire to procure maximum allotments of government securities, Morgenthau said, because the issues have been selling at a premium and thus can be sold at a profit.

For the December financing, the treasury offered 700 million dollars of 13-17 year 2½ percent bonds, the proceeds to provide 300

SUMNER POSTOFFICE SAFE IS BLOWN OPEN

Eighth Postal Robbery in Recent Months Nets Nearly $300 Loot.

SUMNER, Neb. (AP). A gang of thieves, believed to be the same one which burglarized six other postoffices in Nebraska in the last month, robbed the Sumner postoffice, the W. J. Schnoor general store and the L. C. Scudder elevator here Sunday.

Postmaster J. B. Keene said the thieves worked the combination on the postoffice vault and stole $239.57 in stamps and cash. About $260 worth of goods—overalls, coats, shirts—and money was stolen from the Schnoor store.

Crow bars and axes stolen from the elevator were used to smash the safe and the cash register at Schnoor's. Postal Inspector G. E. Gustafson came to investivate. Postoffices at Steinauer, Johnson, Bennet, Tamora, Clatonia and Roseland were robbed in recent weeks.

Nebraska's eighth post office robbery in the past six months took place early Sunday at Sumner in Dawson county. State Sheriff Flake announced Monday.

Flake said he was informed by Dawson Sheriff H. E. Ash that the Sumner post office safe had been blown and "several hundred" dollars in stamps and cash obtained. Most of the loot was in stamps.

The state sheriff said the robbery could have been the work of marauders who have cracked safes at Johnson, Steinauer, Roseland, Clatonia, Tamora, Bennet and Julian in a 6-month period, most of them taking place within recent weeks. He said the same methods have been used in several of the safe blowings.

CONDITION OF POPE SAID SATISFACTORY

Air of Optimism Noticeable At Vatican—Physician Keeps Him Quiet.

VATICAN CITY. (UP). Pope Pius passed a comfortable night, a Vatican spokesman reported.

Prof. Arminta Milani, his physician, visited him again and found his condition "satisfactory."

An air of optimism was noticeable at the Vatican as intimates' belief grew that the holy father would pass successfully the crisis raised by his swollen legs, complicated by asthma.

But they were worried about the pontiff's age. He is 79.

The pope's physician prevailed on him to spend a week in bed. This, intimates said, the pope promised to do. Heretofore he has always objected to "giving in" to weariness or illness, as he has led an extremely active life. In his youth he was noted as a mountain climber.

An official of the papal buiding maintenance department voiced the feeing of many of his associates when he told the United Press:

"There was absolute calmness all night long at the Vatican. Everything followed its usual routine. I am positive the pope is not as seriously ill as is generally believed."

Optimism regarding the outcome was enhanced when Rev. Agostino Gemelli, a noted Franciscan physician, returned to Milan where he is rector of the Catholic university of the Sacred Heart. He had been in consultation with Prof. Milani.

Count Franco Ratti, the pope's nephew, also visited him showing optimism.

An intimate of the holy father said he insisted on getting up Tuesday to participate in an advent sermon, and so he could sign papers, but that his physician would not permit him.

UPHOLD RITTER'S REMOVAL

Court of Claims Rules on District Judge's Claim.

WASHINGTON. (AP). The senate's action in removing Halsted L. Ritter from office as federal district judge at Miami Fla., was upheld by the court of claims. It said the verdict of a court of impeachment was not subject to judicial review. Denying Ritter's motion to call immediately upon the supreme court for an interpretation of the impeachment laws, he claims court gave its independent decision, which was taken here as a step in an appeal to the high tribunal. The court of claims ruled only on the question of jurisdiction.

COLD STARTS TO LOOSEN ITS GRIP OVER THE STATE

Temperatures Rise Steadily, Going From 2 Above to In 20's Here.

Biting cold loosened its grip on the state Monday and temperatures started rising under skies that were partially overcast in the eastern section and clear in the west. The warm wave started moving across the state Sunday night and the mercury here went from 2 above Sunday night to in the 20's Monday afternoon.

Farmers rejoiced over the moisture, but Agricultural Statistician Anderson said at least a foot of snow was needed. He said the fact that the rain soaked in before the freeze came was fortunate as it provided a protection for winter wheat.

At Omaha, the weather bureau said, the mercury went from 2 below to 2 above Monday morning, while at North Platte it rose from 18 to 20 and at Valentine it soared from 4 to 32. No further precipitation was reported, except for a light snow at Cozad and Gresham Sunday night.

The first real taste of winter weather sent the mercury in Lincoln sliding down to zero Sunday morning, as near zero and subzero temperatures in Nebraska followed in the wake of the season's first snowstorm. Coldest reported in the state was -10 at Valentine, and readings of -6 were reported from Syracuse, David City and Norfolk, -4 at Wilber, -3 at Scottsbluff and Omaha and -2 at Plattsmouth.

A bright sun failed to send the mercury past 5 degrees above zero all day in Lincoln Sunday, the maximum being reached at 2 and 4 p. m. At 7 p. m. it was 3 above. Total precipitation from the rain and snow here over the week end was .57, with two inches of snow now on the ground.

Roads to Benefit.

F. H. Klietsch, maintenance engineer of the state highway department, said Sunday night the snow and ice now on Nebraska's highways probably will benefit the gravel roads. The gravel needs moisture, Klietsch said, and will absorb much of the snow when it thaws.

Lincoln streets, however, were perilous and motorists crept along at a snail's pace. The street department scattered ashes and cinders at stop sign corners to provide traction. More than a score of minor auto accidents were reported.

Ice covered pavements resulted in a number of accidents in western Nebraska, particularly the Lincoln highway near North Platte, where motorists reported scores of cars slipped off the road or in minor collisions. About 15 wrecks occurred within the North Platte city limits.

WON'T STAMPEDE MONARCH INTO A HASTY DECISION

Next Move In British Crisis Up to Edward, Premier Tells House.

LONDON. (Copyright by U. P.) Prime Minister Baldwin informed the house of commons Monday that the next move in the crisis caused by the king's determination to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson is up to the king. When his majesty makes a decision, Baldwin said, the governments of Great Britain and the dominions will act.

Baldwin thus avoided putting the government in the position of stampeding the king into hasty and ill-considered action, perhaps even his abdication.

The government, he said, would give the king "the fullest opportunity of weighing the decision which directly involves his own future happiness and the interests of his subjects."

The prime minister warned, however, that prolongation of the present uncertainty would involve the greatest risk to national and imperial interests.

Baldwin insisted that the king himself had raised the issue by informing him of his intention to marry Mrs. Simpson. Other than telling the king that the government will not sponsor a morganatic marriage, the prime minister declared, the government has given his majesty no "advice."

May Fly to Cannes.

His majesty was at Fort Belvedere, reportedly considering a plan to fly to Cannes, where Mrs. Simpson is in seclusion, to have her help him to make a final decision.

The king's strong stand that he intends to marry the woman of his choice regardless of consequences may have been strengthened by the popular reaction in his favor. Demonstrators paraded the streets and shouted for the king, waving placards and banners.

For the first time, Baldwin in his remarks mentioned Mrs. Simpson by name. There was an almost imperceptible ripple thru the crowded chamber when he did so.

The proceedings started with a shock when Col. Josiah Wedgewood, labor champion of the king said: "May I ask whether the prime minister can give assurance that the fatal, final step of abdication, or acceptance of abdica-

Killed by Hit and Run Driver Saturday Morning On No. 10th Street.

Inquest in the death of Preston Cave, 39, found dead on No. 10th street Saturday morning after having been killed by a hit and run driver, was under way Monday afternoon at Splain & Schnells. The jurors were Chris Beck, 1200 D street, Hans Jacobson, 118 No. 13th; Nate Grossman, 2300 B; Earl Hamilton, 1700 P; Jack Davidson, 133 So. 13th and Harold Graham, 101 No. 16th.

Witnesses called to testify were Kenneth Carpenter, Emily Conley, Harry Chamberlain, John T. Morrissey, and Everett Green. Chamberlain told the county attorney he had taken Cave to West Lincoln in his car. Cave was to show him a place where he could do some gambling. They remained at the place for several hours. Chamberlain said he looked for Cave between 9 and 11 p. m. and could not find him. He thought Cave had gone on home. That was the last time he saw Cave alive.

PROFESSORS DISCUSS AMERICAN DEMOCRACY

Based on Romantic Beliefs, Stoke Tells Omaha Town Hall Audience.

OMAHA. (AP). University of Nebraska faculty members took prominent parts here in a discussion of American democracy at the weekly "Town Hall" program Sunday night.

Prof. Harold V. Stoke suggested American democracy was founded on romantic bases. He listed the two major premises as (1) all men are good, and (2) the masses of people have within themselves the intelligence and integrity to govern themselves.

"I call them romantic beliefs," he said, "because they are not based on demonstrable objective facts. They were arrived at by an act of faith." Dean C. H. Oldfather of the college of liberal arts and sciences, said history refutes the assertion the founding fathers based their new government "on a bunch of beliefs."

"After breaking loose from England, the Americans found they could not set up a kingship because of the lack of tradition. An oligarchy or aristocracy was out of the question because there were not enough of the kind of people needed. There was nothing else to do but set up a democracy," he said. Dr. David Fellman of the university political science department, said democracy is still an abiding article of faith.

tion—." Loud cries of "Order! Order!" silenced him.

Baldwin then began his remarks, concluding with a reference to "what the whole house feels—our deep and respectful sympathy with his majesty at this time."

In supplementary questioning after the statement, Baldwin confirmed that the king's decision has not yet been made. He said: "I do not yet, and cannot know, what the king may decide or how he may decide to act. It is impossible for me to enter into hypothetical considerations." (Loud cheers.)

Clement R. Attlee, labor leader, expressed labor's solidarity with Baldwin's expression of sympathy for the king. He then stressed that the house is anxious to receive the fullest information as soon as possible.

Baldwin replied: "I shall be only too glad at the suitable moment to give the house the fullest information of which I am capable."

Baldwin added: "I think the whole house will agree with me at this moment, with the situation so grave and anxious, that while the king is considering this matter and has not made up his mind, I should feel great difficulty in offering information in answer to supplementary questions, especially considering that the answer I should have to give would have to be improvised."

Nevertheless, the unruly Winston Churchill persisted in repeating, for the third time, his demand for assurance that no irrevocable step will be taken before the house has received a full statement "not only on the personal but the constitutional issues involved."

"May I ask him (the prime minister) to bear in mind that these issues are not merely personal to the present occupant of the throne," Churchill said. "They affect the entire constitution."

His reception was cool. There were a few cheers but many shouted "Sit down."

Churchill continued his heckling, interrupted twice by the speaker, who asked him to confine himself to a single question. Several members jeeringly shouted, "Speech!"

Baldwin declined to reply to Churchill's questions, merely saying he did not know what is in the king's mind.

The customary sedate members let loose after Baldwin had finished and indulged in a frantic demonstration for the prime minister, with an undercurrent of hostility toward Churchill.

Ernest Thurtle, laborite, asked whether the opinion of commons on the question of morganatic marriage would be ascertained. Frederick Bellenger, laborite, asked whether, "in view of the serious dislocation to industry and trade in this country, Mr. Baldwin will endeavor to obtain an early reply from the king."

Wedgwood said to reporters in the lobby: "The situation looks a bit better. The government will not do anything until the king replies. Perhaps they are asking him whether he intends to marry later on.

"What the government should realize is the danger of the rise of fascism in this country. The fascists are trying to show that they are the king's only support. I think it is a great danger."

In the house of lords, Lord Halifax repeated verbatim Baldwin's statement in commons.

If King Refuses.

If the king refuses to follow the advice of his ministers and the Baldwin cabinet resigns, the procedure is as follows:

The king calls on Attlee, as labor leader and head of the second largest party in the house, to form a government. Attlee is expected to refuse. Next the king calls on Sir Archibald Sinclair, liberal leader, who also is expected to refuse.

Then the king could call on Winston Churchill, as an ex-minister. Churchill, being the king's champion, presumably would form a government. If it is defeated when it faces the house, Churchill could ask the king to call a general election.

The king would win or lose before the people. If he lost, he would have no choice but to abandon Mrs. Simpson or abdicate.

Mrs. Simpson Rests.

CANNES, France. (UP). Mrs. Simpson, exhausted by her flight across France in search of peace, plans a two-day rest in bed. She told Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers of New York at whose villa Lou vieil she is a guest, that a physician who visited her Sunday advised the rest.

The villa overlooking the Mediterranean, was besieged night and day by relays of newspaper correspondents and photographers.

An inner circle of police ringed the villa. Next was an outer ring of correspondents and photographers—a ring that pressed in occasionally, only to be widened again by the ring of police.

Outside the outer ring was a ring of townspeople, hoping to catch a glimpse of the famous visitor.

Mrs. Simpson, it was learned, complained that she did not even dare go near a window to see the orange trees and roses because photographers equipped with telescopic lenses were waiting to shoot her.

Capt. Reginal Fellowes's yacht Sister Ann, on which the king and Mrs. Simpson cruised to Corsica two years ago, was made ready at Monico for a voyage. The crew were ordered abroad and workmen were making alterations at Fellowes's villa Rocquebrune at Cap Martin.

LITTLE ON HEELS OF GULDAHL GOLF MEET

Lawson Cracks Out a 34 to Cut Lead Down to Single Stroke Monday.

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (UP). Six strokes out of the lead when the final round started Monday, W. Lawson Little, the former amateur king from San Francisco, shot sub-par golf on the first nine holes to challenge Ralph Guldahl of St. Louis for the $10,000 Miami Biltmore open championship.

Playing in a threesome with Guldahl, who started the final round with a 54-hole aggregate of 207 to his 213, Lawson rounded the turn in 34 to cut five strokes from Guldahl's lead.

Guldahl, cracking under the pressure, was out in 39, four over par. Denny Shute, the P. G. A. champion, and a member of the same threesome, was out in par 35 to climb within three strokes of Guldahl and within two of Little.

At the turn the standings were: Guldahl 246, Little 247, and Shute 249.

Horton Smith of Chicago, the halfway leader, was out in 33 to tie Little's 63-hole mark.

ABDICATION NOT THOUGHT OF BY LEO N. SWANSON

cant," said Leo Swanson. He said he would consult his attorney. He presented to the governor's office an opinion by W. C. Fraser, attorney of Omaha, holding that the rest of the election could not be known until the legislature canvasses the vote, and declaring that the attorney general's opinion holding otherwise was "harsh and extreme."

Orderly Way.

Regarding the intimation that the governor has power to enforce laws by the state militia Fraser said "It hardly seems necessary to even intimate such extreme action seems indicated."

"There is an orderly way to determine whether or not your office has been abolished, and if so when that abolishment becomes effective," said Fraser, writing to Swanson. "You are in office now, and my advice to you is to stay there until you are removed by process of law. The logical way for that to be tested is by a quo warranto action, instituted by the attorney general in supreme court."

Are His Acts Invalid?

Land Commissioner Swanson said he did not worry the least bit about the attorney general's views that all his acts since Nov. 3 are void. One of these was his participation Nov. 23 in a meeting of the state board of educational lands and funds in ordering the state treasurer to invest $175,000 of trust funds in United States government bonds. Swanson, Atty. Gen. Wright and Treas. Hall, a bare quorum of this board, issued the order.

State Auditor Ayres said he had issued warrants for salaries of the land commissioners office the past month but that he would issue no more at the close of December, including the land commissioners constitutional quarterly salary. November warrants for janitors under the land commissioner's authority were issued in the amount of $3,071 and warrants for the land commissioner's office force for that month totaled $568. A few of these have not been cashed. Treas. Hall said he would consult the attorney general about the payment of these.

One janitor, Robert Cutru, has not yet cashed his November warrant for $45. Thirty-eight full and part time janitors are working for the land commission. A balance of $58,252 remain in funds not yet expended by the land commissioner.

Henry Wolfe, employed by the board of educational lands and funds, has not cashed his $150 November salary warrant. He says it is not affected by the attorney general's opinion.

Leo Swanson said he had a small expense warrant of his own which he has not cashed.

On the theory that one performing duties under coor of law is entitled to pay for services performed or goods delivered to the state and that his acts are legal Swanson said he is not worrying.

Roasts Bill Drafter.

Atty. Gen. Wright said the constitutional amendment submitted to the people and in the form adopted was "probably the worst of all in form of other bills drafted in the past which have resulted in great injury and expense to the state and its citizens." He said it should have amended all existing provisions of the constitution containing the name of the office of and commissioner, should have said when it was to become effective and should have provided for disposition of the business of the office to be abolished, none of which it did.

G. E. Price, bill drafter for the senate of 1935 said he did not draft the bill, that it came from the house in the form of H. R. 404, that on May 12 he gave the senate judiciary committee a memorandum stating that the bill was invalid in form, that it was unworkable and would result in litigation.

The bill was killed in the senate May 24 by a vote of 12 to 14 and the next day revived on motion of Dafoe and passed by a vote of 20 to 8.

George Mann, bill drafter for the house, was quoted as saying he drew the bill but that he had advised it would need further legislation to care for the work of the office.

The bill was introduced in the house by Von Seggern of Cuming, Deber of Colfax and Biermann of Wayne, all democrats.

Atty. Gen. Wright said he had nothing to say regarding Fraser's suggestion of a test of the right of Swanson to hold the office should be filed by the attorney general. He was leaving it to Leo Swanson to say what he proposed to do.

The land commissioner has $70,000 for care of the capitol and $13,600 appropriation for his own office expenses for a period of two years.

Ancient Statute.

Nebraska's $10,000,000 needn't go without "some" care if State Land Commissioner Swanson is ousted and his appropriations for capitol maintenance lapse. An 1869 law, still on the statute books, says:

"The governor is hereby authorized and empowered to employ some suitable person as janitor of the capitol, who shall receive a salary of $600 per annum, payable quarterly.

The last legislature appropriated $70,000 for wages of capitol caretakers for a period of two years. The governor is also authorized by a recent statute to take charge of all state property not otherwise allocated to some other officer of the state.

MAN IS KILLED AND BABY SEVERELY HURT

Truck Shoves Sedan Against Another Truck On the Highway.

COLUMBUS, Neb. (UP). With a ten weeks old baby dying in a hospital here, deaths in a Butler county highway crash were expected to reach two.

Cling From, 38, farmer living north of Osceola, died Sunday night and physicians despaired of saving the life of his tiny nephew, Merlin From, son of Mr. and Mrs. Loren From, living north of Rising City. The infant is in critical condition from a fractured skull. From died of a fractured skull, broken left leg and fractured pelvis.

The crash occurred when From was driving a truckload of scrap iron to Columbus. Running out of gas near Bellwood, a sedan driven by Loren From pulled up. The men had started to take gas from Loren's car when a truck driven by Jack Willis, of Shelby, struck the sedan from the rear and shoved it against the From truck. The baby was thrown from its mother's arms in the back seat of the car. Loren suffered only a bruised foot and his wife was uninjured. Willis suffered no injuries.

MORGENTHAU CHANGES PLAN FOR BORROWING

million dollars of new cash and retire 400 millions of bills.

An official statement said: "Secretary Morgenthau is offering for subscription, at par and accrued interest, thru the federal reserve banks, $700,000,000, or thereabouts, of 13-17 year 2½ percent treasury bonds of 1949-53, and at the same time is offering an additional amount of the new treasury bonds and an issue of 5 year 1¼ percent treasury notes of series C-1941, both on an exchange basis, par for par, and in payment of which only 2¾ percent treasury notes of series B-1936, maturing Dec. 15, 1936, or 3 percent treasury notes of series C-1937, maturing Feb. 15, 1937, may be tendered.

"The treasury bonds of 1949-55 now offered for cash, and in exchange for treasury notes maturing Dec. 15, 1936, and Feb. 15, 1937, will be dated Dec. 15, 1936, and will bear interest from that date at the rate of 2½ percent per annum payable semiannually. They will mature Dec. 15, 1953, but may be redeemed at the option of the United States on and after Dec. 15, 1949.

"The treasury notes of series C-1941, now offered only in exchange for treasury notes maturing Dec. 15, 1936, and Feb. 15, 1937, will be dated Dec. 15, 1936, and will bear interest from that date at the rates of 1¼ percent per annum payable semiannually. They will mature Dec. 15, 1941, and will not be subject to call for redemption before that date.

"The treasury bonds and the treasury notes will be accorded the same exemptions from taxation as are accorded other issues of treasury bonds and treasury notes, respectively, now outstanding. These provisions are specifically set forth in the official circulars issued today.

"Subscriptions will be received at the federal reserve banks and branches, and at the treasury department, Washington. Banking institutions generally may submit subscriptions for account of customers, but only the federal reserve banks and the treasury department are authorized to act as official agencies.

"With respect to cash subscriptions for the bonds, applications from banks and trust companies for their own account will be received without deposit but will be restricted in each case to an amount not exceeding one-half of the combined capital and surplus of the subscribing bank or trust company; and cash subscriptions from all others must be accompanied by payment of 10 percent of the amount of bonds applied for. With respect to exchange subscriptions, either for the treasury bonds or for the treasury notes, such subscriptions should be accompanied by a like face amount of either 2¾ percent treasury notes of series B-1936, maturing Dec. 15, 1936, or 3 percent treasury notes of series C-1937, maturing Feb. 15, 1937, both of which will be accepted at par, and with respect to the notes of series C-1937 accrued interest will be paid in Dec. 15, 1936.

"The right is reserved to close the books as to any or all subscriptions or classes of subscriptions at any time without notice. All subscriptions will be received subject to allotment and subject to the reservations set forth in the official circulars. Subject to such reservations, exchange subscriptions will be allotted in full. Payment for any bonds or notes allotted must be made or completed on or before Dec. 15, 1936.

"In order to provide an equitable allotment and distribution of the bonds offered for cash among all classes of subscribers, all banking institutions and others concerned are again urged to cooperate in the manner outlined in the letter of May 27, 1936, addressed by the secretary of the treasury to the president of each federal reserve bank and made public at that time.

"The amount of treasury notes of series B-1936 maturing on Dec. 15, 1936, is $428,730,700, any of which may now be exchanged for the treasury bonds or the treasury notes now offered. Treasury bills to the amount of $50,577,000, and interest on the public debt to the amount of about $34,000,000 are payable on Dec. 15, 1936."

GET $40,000 JEWELS.

NEW YORK. (AP). Three armed bandits stole jewelry valued at $40,000 from Mrs. Jeanne E. Kerbs, of 983 Park avenue, when she returned home from a night club, at 4 a. m., she told police. Mrs. Kerbs had worn the jewelry to a private party and a night club and when she and Lester Meyer, her cousin arrived at her home the three men forced their way into her automobile.

utility's property for rate making purposes.

A suit attacking the orders was entered by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and 36 companies controlled by it under the Bell system as well as seven independent companies.

The national association of railroad and utilities commissioners intervened in the case in support of the communication commission's order.

WASHINGTON.—The California and Illinois "fair trade" acts which prohibit the sale of standard products at less than a price fixed by the producer were held constitutional. Justice Sutherland delivered both unanimous opinions which sustained rulings by the state supreme court's upholding the legislation. The measures were intended to prevent price cutting.

A ruling on litigation challenging the constitutionality of the 1936 act broadening the regulation of commodity exchanges was denied.

GOVERNMENT UPSET OF DEFENSE ALIBI

Monday, during the closing hours of the trial of Marvin Gebhart, charged with robbery of the First National bank of Aurora, U. S. Dist. Atty. Nye called a string of rebuttal witnesses whose testimony tended to upset a main defense alibi as to date of a hunting trip. The government hoped to finish with rebuttal during the afternoon leaving instructions and closing arguments for Tuesday. Judge Munger excused jurors, not on this case, until Wednesday morning.

Defense witnesses, in building the Gebhart alibi for the purpose of showing that defendant was in Alliance on Saturday, Aug. 25, 1934, date of the Aurora robbery, 300 miles or more distant, had centered on two points: alleged death of "Doc" Clarke on the following day and statements to the effect that Marvin Gebhart, with Mr. and Mrs. Peter Manewal, their son and James Underwood went rabbit hunting on Aug. 26. Defendant and other witnesses had been positive on this score. Throughout the trial there entered the question of weather conditions on that day, cross questioning to show that it was cold, that potatoes had been dug and that heavy wraps, not usual for August, were worn.

In rebuttal, Mrs. Manewal, admitting that the party personnel was correct, testified that the hunt took place late in October and not in August. She was supported by the testimony of John Essay who said that he saw the party on the hunt in question. He with other boys had gone duck hunting, after the opening of the duck season. Witness said it was late in October.

Underwood's Testimony.

Mr. Underwood, member of the hunting party, called by the defense, testified that he saw Marvin Gebhart at King's Corner, Alliance, on the evening of Aug. 25, 1934, and that on the following day they went hunting with the Manewals.

Ernest Davis, special agent with the Nebraska Stockmens' association, and John S. Burgas, department of justice special agent, on rebuttal, testified concerning a conversation with Underwood on Sept. 29, 1936, at which time he allegedly told them that the hunting trip could not have been on Aug. 26 because of the cold weather.

By rebuttal witnesses, defense attempted to show that in the potato country they do not dig them in August and that on the day of the hunt potatoes were on top of ground in one field.

Josephine Gebhart, wife of defendant, was on the stand under cross-examination and re-direct. She denied questions put by Mr. Nye to the effect that she allegedly tried to induce Albert Carr, Alliance, to fix up a receipt showing that Marvin was employed by him on the day of the robbery. She also denied that on the day the bank was robbed she called Gebhart's parents to inquire when the boys would be home.

Deputy U. S. Marshal O'Grady, Kenneth Logan, special agent with the department of justice, and R. C. Hoyt, clerk of the court, were on the stand during the morning. Logan estimating distance between Alliance and Aurora at about 300 miles.

The defense rested at 11:23 a. m.

EDWARD FAILS PLAY GAME BY RULES

"Jazz Baby King" Is Acting Like Silly Middle Aged Boy Says Mencken

Note H. L. Mencken noted team of letters of Baltimore where Wallis Warfield Simpson spent her early life has written exclusively for the Associated Press the following article on the situation precipitated by King Edward VIII's apparent determination to marry the former Baltimore belle.

By H. L. MENCKEN.

BALTIMORE (AP) The natural sympathy which all us poor fools have for one another should not be allowed to obscure the fact that in the comedy now sinking so miserably into farce his Britannic majesty has acted very badly. The conflict in that comedy has not been between a romantic hero on the one hand and a cruel ogre on the other, but one between a silly middle aged boy and a jackdog trying to recall him to his duty. The strength of the king's case such as it is lies in the circumstance that everyone loves a lover, even and perhaps especially when his love affair is ridiculous. Its weakness likes in the fact that the respect of the world is reserved for him who plays the game according to the rules.

Has Edward done so? It must be manifest that he has not. There is between him and his liege a definite contract, no less explicit because it is mainly only implied. They agree on their side to yield him certain valuable deferences, honors, prerogatives and powers the widest and most glorious that any man on earth enjoys today. And he agrees on his party to conduct himself according to certain precise patterns many of them out of harmony with the normal inclinations of man.

Some of the articles that bind him are well known. He has no vote and may not whoop for this or that candidate at election time. He may not accept an engagement in the moving picture. He may not open a cocktail lounge in Piccadilly, or even a haberdashery shop or insurance office in the Strand. He may not become a Roman Catholic or a Moslem, or a Christian scientist tho many millions of his subjects subscribe to those faiths. He may not be converted publicly to communism or fascism, or nazism or any other political theology not official in his country. He may not go about his public duties in slacks or overalls, but must dress up for every occasion in the garb deemed suitable for it. The army and navy of the empire, in the eyes of its law, are under his personal command and indeed his property, but he may not disband either of them without the consent of parliament, or send them upon enterprises that parliament disapproves.

He Knew His Obligations

The list of such obligations is very long and some of them are undoubtedly onerous. But he took them on when he took the oath as king, and he can no more evade them without dishonor than he could evade his obligation to be decently dutiful to his mother; not the least of them is his duty to contract no marriage that violates the mores of his realm as those mores are interpreted by the constituted authorities, spiritual and secular. You and I are free as private men to marry any woman who are optimistic enough to have us, but the king of England has no such liberty. For he is not and never can be a private man, however hard he may try to think so. He is the ruler and symbol of a great empire and the stammhalter of a dynasty.

It must be plain that the marriage he proposes is not suitable to that status. I am quite willing and indeed eager as a fellow Britonorean to admit that the lady of his choice is a model of grace and virtue. She would make him a conscientious wife, and what is more she would add greatly to the joys of human existence at his court. But the fact remains that the king of England simply cannot have a couple of morganatic brothers-in-law hanging about the back door of the palace. He may not marry a woman whose previous adventures in connubial bliss have gone beyond the point held to be seemly by his people. He may not flout a prejudice that is as deep if perhaps as irrational as the stuffy English prejudice against steam heat thin underwear and table cooking.

Cheers Are Not Barometer

The cheers of the London mob need not deceive us. It is made up in part of many thousands of persons eager only to get the government and in part of tipsy fools. Its opinion is not the sober and considered opinion of the British people. For good or for evil the true Britons are opposed in every duty to the innocent artless flummeries of Hollywood and Long Island. And despite their natural human sympathy for a man in love, especially for his girl, they will very decidedly be in favor of giving every game a sporting chance.

A "Jazz Baby" King

In that field Edward has failed them and better shocked them. They have been giving them obedience to a man who seemed to be and was assumed to be the guardian inheritor of all the ancient decorums they so ruthlessly venerate. They find themselves confronted by a jazz baby willful petulant irresponsible and preposterous. It is almost as if he had been caught robbing a hen-roost or joining the circus. The people of the United States would have been quite as shocked if their president had revealed himself in the same character and proposed to launch it to the same folly. Nay, even the people of Mongolia would have been shocked.

Will his majesty throw off the cabinet and marry the lady? I do not undertake to answer for I retired formally from prophecy on the black Weimes following the first Monday of last November. But whether he fights his way to the altar or falls by the way it is of the obvious that he has brought himself to ruin and that he'll be lucky if he doesn't involve in that ruin all the other members of his family.

"Dedicated to the people of Nebraska and to the development of the resources of the state."—Sept 7, 1867

"There is no place like Nebraska"

English laws have the king tied up any way he attempts to move. Even if he abdicates he will not be free to marry whom he pleases. He will have to obtain the consent of the king who succeeds him in order to contract a marriage valid in England.

Here and there we hear of a shortage of skilled mechanics. That is an indication that work is picking up and that there is more demand for labor. It indicates another thing. We haven't been making skilled mechanics out of apprentices in recent years. The new crop of mechanics is short and when the demand grows greater it will be more acutely felt.

The new constitution has been proclaimed in Russia and a new day in the political life of that nation has dawned. The constitution, patterned after the constitution of the United States, provides for many of the things which have preserved the individual liberty of Americans and permitted the nation to grow and prosper and live in comparative peace with itself. The Russian people have not achieved everything Americans boast, but the forward step has been an enormous one and cheering to them and the outside world.

It is reported that the Pullman company will begin an advertising campaign during the year to come, the first in its history. The new fast trains have affected that company's business. It is reported that on some of these trains the railroads find it difficult to sell Pullman tickets. There is an increase in rail fare where Pullmans are used. The coaches on the new high speed trains are made more comfortable than such equipment of other days. High speed shortens the time on the trip and makes sleeping car accommodations seem less necessary. And so the Pullman company must fight for business.

Violent tornadic winds have ripped thru the south causing many human injuries, and the destruction of much livestock and property. The south does not have heavy snows and zero weather. But it does have winter wind storms that are terrifying. The snow and cold have disadvantages but at the same time it is possible to protect one's self against them. A reasonably good shelter, proper food and clothing and a supply of fuel makes life quite comfortable. There is no real protection against tornadoes, however, and little warning that they are on their way. Substantial homes offer some protection, but the damage is great regardless.

The pan-American peace conference has under discussion a neutrality pact which it is hoped all the American republics will embrace. The desire for peace in the Americas seems universal. The problem is to preserve it, even tho it is in no danger now. The neutrality pact is offered as a workable scheme keeping international relations in the area on the same high and desirable plane they now occupy. The test will come, of course, when some dispute such as that which developed over the Chaco, develops. If war can be prevented, then the Buenos Aires pact, if it is ever finally adopted, will have served a useful purpose.

Late analyses of the Spanish situation seem to point more and more to the belief that the recent offensive against Madrid was staged permitted by fascist sympathizers to prove to Europe that Franco has made a fetish of what the rebel and forces set out to do, except that the final drive to take the city has not been carried out. For two weeks or more the fighting has not been between rebels and loyalists but a campaign by foreign military aviators to blow Madrid off the face of the earth. This campaign continues and grows more and more effective as the resistance becomes weaker. In Catalonia a clash between two foreign forces is possible when the theater of operations moves to that territory and if Britain maintains its present attitude. Such a clash might spread to other zones, all over Europe and possibly over most of the world.

THAT ENGLISH "CRISIS."

It is little short of amazing that at a time when the world is faced with so many problems, when the peace of the world is in actual danger, when Britain has delivered an ultimatum to the Spanish rebels which may yet require backing with armed forces, that the English cabinet and parliament should become worked up over a domestic squabble in the royal family. In other words it is silly to term this situation a "crisis," and all the more silly if the gossip and meddling by busybodies in the king's affairs should really have precipitated a crisis.

In the first place there was nothing to get excited about. The king had never given any indication that he intended to marry the twice divorced Mrs. Simpson. Secondly, her decree will not be final for five months. Nosy cabinet officers, loud mouthed members of parliament, and a supersensitive royal family, got the jitters and the whole world is agog because a stubborn king seems intent upon testing his power.

If, however, it is silly to term the English situation a "crisis," or that it should have developed into a crisis if it is one, then the American public is in for a good laugh at its own expense. Americans have been intensely interested in the king's affairs. They have been at least partially to blame for the present situation.

Even now the display of interest is amazing. The newspapers have given the incidents ample space as they develop. Over the week end radio programs were interrupted at frequent intervals to bring bulletins. Networks opened early and announcers piled out of bed in the cold before the late gray winter dawn to bring to the anxious public the latest developments in the English squabble.

Unfortunately we can scarcely make fun of the way the English have worked themselves into a lather over this little affair. We have kept ourselves sweating along with them, when the affair concerns us only slightly and indirectly. If the staid British are a humorous sight as they tear their hair and muss their clothes, they are no more mirth provoking than the democratic people of America, found with faces buried in newspapers and ears glued to loud speakers.

REAL SOCIAL PROGRESS.

The remarkable rapidity with which business recovery is being achieved without any particular aid from politics, and in the opinion of many in spite of government restrictions, has had one excellent result. We hear less and less about the breakdown of our economy otherwise known as the capitalistic system. It would be whistling against the wind to repeat what has been said in the past three or four years about the incapacity of the system to adjust itself to changes and about its inherent and fatal weaknesses, when it is staging so sensational a comeback. Natural forces have combined with business leadership in bringing about a condition in which farming and industry alike are operating at a profit and the rise in prices has forced a resumption of forward buying, thus getting rid of the hand-to-mouth buying that aided in retarding recovery.

The continuance of the present forward movement will eventually silence all of those critics who were so sure that the system that has built up America to industrial eminence marked by a wider spread prosperity and higher level of wages than anywhere else was doomed to destruction. These critics have pictured the capitalistic system as the enemy of social progress, but they overlooked many achievements along that line. These were recently summarized by George E. Roberts, corporate adviser to the National City bank of New York, in these words:

"The historic record is a continuous story of social advance—of new arts, new services, new products, new employments, new opportunities and always new possibilities giving zest to life. Within the range of memory electricity, the telephone, the automobile, the moving picture, the radio, the aeroplane have been developed into common use and every industry of basic services to the public has been made over by new materials, steel and its alloys, the rubber tire, modern printing, modern paper using, the modern bakery, modern engineering, modern plumbing, modern heating and refrigeration, and so on without end are of the same period. Moreover, life has been lengthened, health protected, hygiene, medicine and surgery advanced, education extended, culture broadened, and the common standard of comfort and usefulness has been raised. And all of this has resulted from freedom of individual initiative, with specialization in research, learning and industry—vital principles of social progress.

The growth of corporate power carries certain advantages but it also carries certain benefits. Most of the inventions Mr. Roberts lists as contributing to social progress have been the children of research work, and this is not possible save where money is available to finance long and often costly processes.

THINKING ABOUT HIS WORK.

Senator Burke of this state has made the first pages of the papers recently with two suggestions, both of which will interest Nebraskans. One relates to national government and the other to a Nebraska agricultural problem.

The Nebraska senator says he will, if some other senator does not, move to secure an amendment to the constitution which will provide for a single six year term for president. That suggestion ought to find approval the nation over. It can be discussed now without embarrassment to anyone. The country has been committed since its beginning to the two term policy for presidents. Mr. Roosevelt will be serving his second term. Passage of such an amendment could have no political implications. The country will benefit by longer terms in which the president has no thought of a following campaign. He will be free to work out his policies without thought of politics. This should be a popular issue with the people. Its adoption would be to the best interests of the nation.

The Nebraska senator has also been thinking about things at home. He has noted the interest over the state and especially along the Platte valley in pump irrigation. He will favor the appropriation of a million dollars to pioneer in pump irrigation. In many valleys of the state underground water at little depth is obtainable. Much land that does not now produce in dry years could be made productive in all but the worst of years. Some crops can be raised even in the hottest and dryest years if water can be made available.

Senator Burke has been thinking about Nebraska. There will be division of opinion on what the senator may propose, but it is at least cheering to know that Nebraska's much criticised senator all along has been giving problems of his home state consideration.

FOOTNOTES.

Edward F. McGrady, new deal's labor trouble shooter, "will be the most important American umpire," if the struggle between industrial and craft unions continues to a point where jurisdictional strikes break out, according to Time magazine, in which the election is described as "only the starting gun for a labor march up the avenue opened by the new deal."

Detailing high spots in the arbitration work of the "slim, dapper and energetic, Jersey City born and South Boston bred" assistant secretary of labor, the article says:

"In three years he has spent less than a quarter of his time in his air cooled Washington office, has flown an estimated 145,000 miles to stir the new deal's peace porridge wherever labor troubles brewed. Today, with labor troubles brewing harder than ever, his peace porridge is getting hotter.

"The burden falls on him because Secy. Perkins is, in the eyes of labor, an outsider. If she should retire, her job might be given to one of Franklin Roosevelt's liberal friends, such as Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York City, or it might be given to Ed McGrady."

Mr. McGrady has had a long career on the inside of both labor and politics, the article continues.

"Altho he looks like a man in his 40's he was already 22 years old when he got a job as a pressman on the Boston Herald 42 years ago," the article relates. "A good back slapper and able talker, he rose to head the local union, was spotted by George L. Berry, president of International Printing Pressmen's union, who picked him as an organizer. Berry, who belongs to the school of polished labor leaders, insisted that his organizers dress well and stop at the best hotels. Ed McGrady learned his lesson and today, elegant, with a good cigar in his mouth and the double-breasted manner of a gentleman of substance, he strides into strike conferences as Adolphe Menjou might enter a ballroom.

"His political career also began early, as a member of Boston's common council and of the Massachusetts legislature. After the war, Samuel Gompers called him to Washington to mix labor and politics as a lobbyist for the A. F. of L. He proved an expert at it—affable, friendly, fast, efficient. He systematically canvassed every member of congress, found the 'key' to persuasion, did not do parlor tricks but in a few years' time got jobs for himself and friends, joined up with the St. Peter and St. Paul Total Abstinence society."

He was hosted by his friends for the post of secretary of labor when the new deal took office, the article says, but Miss Frances Perkins got the call from President Roosevelt.

Miss Perkins at first refused to have McGrady as assistant secretary. But immediately after he spectacularly settled the coal strike of 1933, she met Postmaster General Farley (McGrady's sponsor) at a cabinet meeting and said "I was mistaken about Mr. McGrady," and he promptly became her aid.

The promise of milder weather is welcome altho a great deal more snow would also be welcome. Zero weather is not often accompanied by heavy snows, however, so it is a desire for more moisture as well as relief from the cold that prompts the general welcome of the weather man's promise of higher temperatures.

MORE OR LESS PERSONAL.

"I saw America," says David Lawrence, Washington correspondent of The Journal, in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post. The article is descriptive of his trip into 40 of the nation's 48 states while he was making his political survey last fall. Between the first of August and the last of October Mr. Lawrence traveled 20 thousand miles in this country and saw much of it. During that trip he stopped in Lincoln and met a number of his friends here. He also made a short stop at Omaha. From here he went to Kansas City. As a result of his trip here his article is illustrated with a picture of the new capitol, which he mentions in his article. He says: "Cities are beginning to grow conscious of their appearance. Many of them have beautiful city halls, and many states, like North Dakota and Nebraska, have good looking state capitols, possessing an architectural majesty which makes the monstrosities of the hemispherical dome age appear very old fashioned indeed."

Of the country as a whole he concludes: "I saw it in the last three months moving on with irresistible force. I saw the poised American people quietly flexing the sinews of their own strength for the battles that lie ahead. I saw America in the growing pains of 150 years of remarkable evolution."

A few American authors, and plagiarists in general, have found pleasure in making fun of the American noon luncheon club—of Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and like organizations. Mr. Lawrence takes a more generous and serious view. Discussing what they have done, he says: "I find in them the best instrument for the development of an awakened social responsibility. They take preoccupied business men from their work once a week and make them think of other individuals, of the simple chores of life that are sometimes neglected. More than to any other single influence, I believe the growth of community life in America, recently, along better lines, can be attributed to the quiet and unobtrusive zeal of America's service clubs." Mr. Lawrence saw America with the trustworthy and sympathetic eyes of an American, and the picture he paints of the land he serves and loves is a cheering one, colorful, because a natural one, true in every particular. Mr. Lawrence is a fact finder and as he finds facts he reports them, faithfully and well.

Another job awaits the unicameral legislature. It is to be asked to set up new machinery for handling the school lands presented the state by the federal government when it came into the union, now that the land commissioner is to be out of the picture. At one time these lands still held by the state were estimated to be worth 20 millions, but that valuation has shrunk in recent years. The permanent school fund, which is one of the beneficiaries of this endowment, totals around 14 million dollars, but its income has been decreased in recent years by the falling interest level of those securities in which its funds may be legally invested and the state still owes it $261,000 lost 40 years ago by official defalcations. In spite of the fact that the constitution requires such losses to be made good, each successive legislature has dodged the obligation. Now the school heads are insisting that something be done about it.

A Lincoln man who has watched many sessions of the legislature offers this suggestion: "Let every voter in every district watch the performance of the legislator from his district from now on. Possibly, if he does that, he will be able to vote more intelligently the next time a member of the legislature is to be elected. Able, honest and careful consideration of the needs of the state should be the real test."

The observing reporter drops this note into the editorial basket: "For the cheery thought department: Trucker, with two companions, leaves a liquor store. The trucker carries a bottle of liquor. He climbs back into the truck which he left double parked in the street. The liquor might give him courage to face the snow, wind and treacherous highway, but other motorists on the road might not look at his possession with the same complacency."

And here is another note from a similar source. "Hotel managers report the crowd that visited their dining rooms after the military ball the other night was unusually well behaved. There was little or no liquor in sight. There was no evidence of its use. One hotel man with years of experience here reported this was the first time in years that there were no noticeable cases of overindulgence."

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Q. What are some of the marks on very early English silver?

A. On every silver article of English make subsequent to 1300 (except some very small objects) there should be one of the following marks: the leopard's head, the worker's or maker's mark, the annual letter, the lion passant, the lion's head erased and the figure of Britannia, or the Sovereign's head.

Q. What is the purpose of the Lizette Woodworth Reese Foundation?

A. The monument represented by this organization was initiated by the Woman's Literary club of Baltimore, of which the poet was a charter member. The purpose is to make live the works of this famed poet. The foundation is growing rapidly.

MEN AND THINGS.

Senator Borah steps to the front to say that there is no such thing as overproduction in a country that has unfulfilled wants. This is technically correct, but when a farmer or a manufacturer produces more goods than he can sell because consumers do not have the wherewithal to buy them, he suffers just as much as if he brought forth a greater quantity than could actually be consumed. The senator rightly concludes that our problem is not that of production control, but of developing a better system of distribution. There has been a lot of talk along that line for several years, but nobody seems to be smart enough to find the answer.

Men still seem to be but children grown. At least that is one's conception of the spokesmen for the dictatorships in the various countries where the people run around with rings in their noses. If there is anything more childish than the boasts these government oracles make in the pep speeches they deliver we have not read it recently. It these are intended for home consumption, their circulation should be curtailed within their own borders. The I-dare-you-to-step-on-my coattails attitude is in strange contrast with their declarations of peaceful intent.

The senate campaign investigating committee expresses the opinion that too much money is being spent in our political campaigns, but while the million or more officeholders who were compelled, directly or indirectly, to contribute part of their salaries to the campaign fund will heartily agree with them, we don't seem to be able to see what even the senate investigators can do about it. So far no law has been passed which tells the man with the coin how he shall spend it, and this seems to be one of the closely-held privileges of citizenship.

The planned economy idea as applied to government is part and parcel of any program by which government seeks to guarantee security to individuals. Both of these programs involve signing away practically all individual liberty. We might all be better off, as is claimed, but it will be remembered that in brutal times, when the big fellow planned the lives of all his retainers, men did not remain satisfied with a security that closely resembles that which we are offered. Once the government camel gets its nose under the individual tent we may expect interference with every detail of living and certainly must submit to regulation of the number of children.

Individually our principal objection to planned economy other than that stated, is that the planning will be done by the politicians or those only once removed from them and that until government shows a better record for efficiency and care in the handling of funds it would be a case of jumping from the well known frying pan into the more detested fire.

DR. BRADY'S HEALTH TALK.

The other day I tried to explain that the state of nutrition, rather than mere robust or muscular strength, determines an individual's susceptibility to or immunity from pneumonia and other respiratory infections. To the layman this will seem more plausible in respect to diphtheria or influenza than it will in respect to pneumonia, for the popular mind cannot readily be disabused of the notion that pneumonia is somehow due to cold and wet. Not that the notion is so far behind the times, for only 30 years ago Dr. Osler wrote in the "doctors bible" that "there can be no question as to the close association of pneumonia with exposure." In the same edition Dr. Osler with admirable restraint confined himself to the remarks that "diphtheria is most prevalent in the cold autumn weather" and that "the outbreak of epidemics of influenza is independent of all seasonal and metereological conditions, except perhaps sunshine. The worst have been in the colder seasons of the year." Up to his dying day Osler clung tenaciously to the belief that cold was an important cause of these and other diseases, altho even 30 years ago he accepted what was then the current theory of physicians, namely, that "cold is now regarded simply as a factor in lowering resistance of the bronchial and pulmonary tissues." In Dr. Osler's last days he invariably attributed his attacks of bronchitis to bad weather or a cold lecture room.

While extraordinary muscular development or strength is no protection against pneumonia or other respiratory infection, indeed may tend to handicap the natural immunity process, it seems evident that proper physical training favors immunity, since physical training certainly promotes good nutrition, that is, good posture, circulation, oxygenation in tissues and cells, better metabolism. In other words, one who gets a fair amount of daily exercise, whether by walking, playing some game, doing muscular work or formal exercise, is less likely to contract pneumonia or other respiratory infection than is one who avoids all physical activity and leads a sedentary, lazy life. Remember that the immediate effect of any kind of muscular exercise, work or play, is increased absorption of oxygen in the blood and tissues, and oxygen is the vital need of the body tissues in fighting infection or intoxication (toxemia). As Prof. Yandell Henderson has so well shown, in practically all fatalities, except death by burning, the cause of death is anoxia (asphyxia or lack of oxygen in the body tissues or cells).

My prescription for any one who wishes to enjoy the highest attainable degree of immunity against pneumonia and other respiratory infection is two miles of oxygen three times a day, on the hoof.

THE PUBLIC MIND.

New Deal Arithmetic.

SEWARD. Like all the old folks, brother and I have been reading the question and answer series in the press about the social security thing which is about to be presented to us, and after our discussions pro and con we finally reduced it to figures the other night to see what brother would get out of it. Here they are, but if we have gone wrong on the stuff blame it on our "edification." (We both have University of Hardknocks sheepskins). We based it on the average yearly earnings which brother has made up to when the N. D. came, which was about $600. He will have 19 years yet till he is 65, the pension age. The amount of pension to be drawn is based on the total wages earned from now till 65 which would amount to 19 times $600 or $11,400. The pension is then figured as follows for this amount:

|---|---|
| ½ of 1% for 1st $3,000 | $15 |
| ½ 12 of 1% of balance | 7 |
| Total pension per month | $22 |

This times 12 totals $264, amount for a year. We figured a life expectancy of ten years or a total pension drawn of $2,640.

Now for the cost to brother:

|---|---|
| For each first 3 years 1½% of $600 | $ 18.00 |
| Each of next 3 years 2½% | 27.00 |
| Each of next 3 years 2½% | 27.00 |
| Each of last 3 years 2½% | 27.00 |
| Next 7 years 3% | 126.00 |
| Total cost to brother | $252.00 |
| Employer pays like amount | 252.00 |
| Total cost of brother's pension | $504.00 |
| Amount drawn | $2,640 |
| Amount paid | 504 |
| Difference to somebody else's debit | $2,136 |

That's new deal arithmetic to the nth power but we are happy for the governor has promised no new taxes and in this governmental "Information Service Circular No. 9" it says "that is the most you will ever pay." (Meaning the amount figured according to the above formula which is applied according to this circular). But what made us both weep with sadness is that the limit to be drawn is $85 per month for anyone and we can't work out any "life" at all for gen. Jim Farley and "dapper" Rex Tugwell on such a paltry pension as that!

DONALD F. LOGAN.

New Farm Plan.

MADRID, Neb.—When every bit of our farm land in the United States is worked personally by its owner for a good living and not for selfish profit and it is free from rent, speculation, foreclosure and interest we will need no crop insurance nor social conservation act and our nation will be resting on a far more secure foundation than now.

Tenants must raise big crops or be replaced by someone who can. Mortgage interest with fear of foreclosure forces a man to go his limit in production even when he knows he is misusing his soil.

Probably it wouldn't cost much more to pay all farm land interest right out of the United States treasury than it will to put over an uncertain crop insurance plan and the soil conservation deal.

Let each farmer conserve his own soil and run his own risk. He can, when all he has to pay is taxes and to get a living from his farm.

A government bond can be issued to each mortgage holder for his mortgage if it is not inflated or to a landlord who does not care to farm his land personally. There is no better security for land than our soil.

Get small holdings into the hands of actual farmers who live on the place they farm, giving preference to foreclosed farmers. When these have all their own money to spend for industry's goods you will see things move in this dear old U. S. A.

These facts should be negotiable and their maturity should not worry us. Our government should require at least twice the amount of the bond and coupon interest when a farm is sold to shut out speculation in land.

If we must have land reform it should go to feed our poor and not to make the rich richer. Whose earth is this any way?

JOHN LATENSER, SR., IS TAKEN BY DEATH

Prominent Architect Built Many Buildings for Omaha Firms.

OMAHA. (AP). John Latenser, sr., 78, prominent Omaha architect for almost 50 years, died at his home north of Florence early Sunday.

During his career here, he designed the Douglas county courthouse, city auditorium, Brandeis block and theater building, Central, North and South high schools, old Brownell hall, many of the public grade schools and numerous downtown properties and residences.

Until his health failed last summer he was active in the firm of John Latenser & Sons. One of his sons, John Latenser, jr., is public works administration director of Nebraska. Another son, Frank, has carried on the firm.

Latenser was born in Liechtenstein, a small state between Austria and Switzerland, into a family of master architects. His great grandfather, grandfather and father, all named Frank Joseph Latenser, all were architects. He came to Chicago, then moved to Cedar Rapids, Ia., and then to Omaha where he started in a small way, designing cottages built for as low as $500.

His first school job was designing Webster street school in 1887. He won the contract over 18 established competitors. Later his plan for uniform school buildings, built in units ranging from four to 16 rooms, was accepted.

He pointed out to government officials how the ground underneath the Omaha postoffice would become "fatigued" with its massive stonework and settle, which later brought him a commission in Chicago when the city postoffice under construction started to slant off toward the lake. With a corps of workmen, he corrected the fault.

His wife, another son, George; a daughter, Mrs. Clarence Kirkland, and seven grandchildren also survive.

CHURCHES IN TRIAL MERGER

York Baptist and Congregational Join Until May.

YORK, Neb. (AP). The First Congregational and First Baptist churches of York approved an experimental merger Sunday. The congregations will combine until May, 1937, and then determine whether to continue the plan.

The Congregational church, without a pastor, submitted the proposal. The Congregational church will be used and that group will supply 60 percent of the total expenses. The Baptists will provide a parsonage and pay 40 percent of the expenses. The pastor of the merged churches will be Rev. Ray West, Baptist minister.

The new congregation, whose membership is approximately 300, will be known as the Baptist-Congregational church. Representatives of the two churches will meet early this week to arrange Christmas programs.

Thomas Woods Finds Germans Not Suffering from Denial of Liberties

People in Germany have been stripped of all their rights and individual liberties, but the Germans themselves have yet to find out about it. This is the conclusion of Thomas C. Woods, Lincoln attorney, who returned Sunday morning after spending five months in Europe, chiefly in Berlin. "A man may go about his business or pleasure much as in any other country and without being hampered by the government," Mr. Woods said.

The American in Germany encounters the government chiefly in connection with Hitler's aversion to imports. Mr. Woods made the trip mainly to complete arrangements for the purchase of a German firm. This is often a difficult procedure but may be accomplished when proof is given that the business will aid employment and exports. Government permission is also needed to remove the stock of a purchased firm. Hitler's aim is a favorable balance of trade, hence imports are taxed, exports fostered. The American is acutely conscious of this when he seeks to buy his favorite brand of cigaret and finds the price is the equivalent of $1.75 a package. He who likes oyster stew may have as much as he wants at 25 cents an oyster. Eggs and poultry come from Denmark, but not fresh eggs. Mr. Woods hopes to go back when he can stay longer as he thinks there should be a fresh egg in Germany somewhere if one just had time to look for it.

Germans do not hate Americans. They do not even try to overcharge and otherwise take advantage of the foreigner. Mr. Woods found people of all classes both courteous and interested at all times. Germany expects war and is ready for it but her people do not want war, at least not for vengeance. A German lawyer acquaintance of Mr. Woods made a tour thru France with his family and reported courteous treatment at all times. This man at least did not even hate the French despite the years of warfare between the two nations.

Germany considers herself the great bulwark against communism in Europe. She feels her chief enemy is red Russia and to protect herself is willing to go to any lengths. For this reason Hitler is supporting as much as possible the rebel forces in Spain. Yet, Mr. Woods believes, were the fascists actually in danger of defeat even such a liberal nation as England would come to their aid. German business men speak of Russia as the best source of Germany's greatest need, raw materials, but they do not express views as to how these might be obtained. They do expect trouble with Russia, but they do not think war will strike Europe for two or three years. When the time comes, they hope to be prepared.

How do the German people feel about Hitler? "Hitler is stronger now than ever before and is growing stronger," Mr. Woods says. During his entire stay he never heard anyone express dissatisfaction with the government. There are more reasons for this contentment than mere suppression.

For the traveler the government provides "travel marks" for living expenses at 20 cents each in American money. The ordinary mark costs 40, but the "travel mark" and reasonable cost of German products and hospitality enables the visitor to live at a minimum of expense. In short, Mr. Woods found Germany a good place to live and feels little more can be asked of any nation.

YOU have to work at marriage to make a success of it. Men may be selfish, unsympathetic, but that's the way they're made and you might as well realize it.

MEXICO OPENS ITS DOORS TO TROTZKY

Modern Man Without a Country Nears End of Stay in Norway.

MEXICO CITY. (AP). Mexico's government opened its doors Monday to Leon Trotzky, the modern man without a country.

Granting of asylum to the oft-exiled former bolshevist leader was "in line with Mexico's traditional policy of giving refuge, without questions, to all political refugees," Eduardo Hay, Mexican foreign minister, declared.

It had no political significance, Hay said, confirming reports current here for ten days that friends of Trotzky, who soon must leave his exile in Norway, had sought permission for him to live in Mexico.

Asylum for Trotzky, Hay asserted, did not "presuppose, of itself, affinity of thought, of purposes, or of tendencies between the country which concedes it and the individual who benefits by it."

The government disregarded the powerful confederation of workers of Mexico, openly sympathetic with the regime of Joseph Stalin in Russia. The confederation announced last week it would use "every means" at its command to keep the exiled leader out.

Trotzky was deported from Russia seven years ago by Stalin, secretary general of the communist party and a bitter opponent of Trotzky's tenets.

Excluded by all European countries and nearing the end of the period of grace allowed him in Norway, a statement issued by Hay said, Trotzky would have faced the necessity of returning to Russia, whose government is hostile to him.

Because his life would be "in grave danger," Hay declared, a permit would be extended to him "as soon as the formal petition is presented."

Diego Rivera, Mexican mural painter and communist leader, appealed directly to Mexican President Lazaro Cardenas for admission of Trotzky, once a ruling power in soviet Russia.

OSLO. (AP). Leon Trotzky's attorney said Monday the exiled Russian revolutionary was "doubtful" about the advisability of accepting Mexico's offer of a haven.

"He must have guarantees," the attorney said, "that his enemies are not secretly behind the arrangement."

COLLISION COSTS 6 LIVES

Automobiles in Headon Crash Near Dartmouth, O.

PORTSMOUTH, O. (AP). A head-on automobile collision which cost six lives and injured four other persons went into the records as the worst in the history of Scioto county. Rescuers kept the death toll from mounting higher by pulling the injured from the wreckage before one machine was destroyed by fire. The cars collided about midnight in a driving rain at the crest of a hill near here.

The body of the automobile of Ralph N. Arnold, 30, was shorn from its chassis. The car of Deputy Sheriff Harry Thornton, 34, plunged into a ditch and caught fire. Both men were killed. The other dead: Robert Kaylor, 30; Elmer Reiser, 25; Miss Norma Fannin, 20; Miss Juanita Cramer, 19.

GIRL HURT IN CRASH.

W. Larson, 1501 S. According to police, Hedges, who was driving north, applied his brakes as he neared Larson's car and skidded into it. The girl was attended at St. Elizabeth hospital by Dr. L. V. Gibson.

LITTIE HOPE FOR TINY BABE

Makeshift Incubator Keeps Ounce Girl Alive.

DAVENSWOOD, W. Va. (AP). A makeshift incubator kept a 24 ounce baby girl alive, but physicians held little hope for her survival. The baby was born to Mrs. W. R. Allis in her home in an abandoned school house five miles out in the mountains. Dr. J. H. Donovan, after building the "incubator from two old fur coats and a ragged blanket, said: "She's awfully weak. The little tike would be much better off in a hospital but I'm afraid it may be too late to move her now."

Over the protests of Atty. Radke, representing E. H. Luikart, receiver of the Hoskins State bank, the supreme court Monday advanced for hearing at the Jan. 4 session the test case involving his right to continue as receiver. Sheldon of the Nebraska Historical society that the state of Nebraska has not enacted legislation in compliance with an act of congress relating to disposition of records of federal land offices which have been abolished and while the plats and tract books of the former Alliance land office are of considerable value to the general land office at Washington, if the state of Nebraska will enact legislation providing for the reception and safe keeping of the records in compliance with an act of congress, consideration will be given to the matter of turning them over to the State Historical society.

of the people is not a legislative bill, and rules of law applicable to title, passage and signing by the governor, and the like have no application. The constitutional provision requiring all amendments to be entered upon legislative journals is for the purpose of avoiding secrecy. This aim is satisfied when an entry is made in the journals without the text in full of the amendment, the weight of authority being that an identification entry in the journals is sufficient.

Regarding whether the state board or the legislature should canvass the vote on amendments before the governor may issue his proclamation declaring the amendment adopted the attorney general holds that sections 32-922 and 32-930, and particularly 32-930, which provide for a canvass by the legislature, he says they are probably unconstitutional for the reason that the phrase "all questions under constitution voted upon by the whole people" must include initiative and referred questions, both as to legislation and constitutional amendment, which is covered by section 1 to 4 inclusive or article III of the constitution. Section 4 provides that initiative and referred measures shall be returned and canvassed in the manner prescribed for the canvass of the votes for president, which is canvassed by the state canvassing board, therefore any statute for canvassing by the legislature would violate this constitutional provision.

The opinion of the attorney general further finds it would be immaterial to the adoption of the amendment and the effectiveness whether the vote on amendments be canvassed by the state board or legislature or whether the governor should issue his proclamation, as section 1 of article XVI of the constitution is self-executing because it declares an amendment receiving the proper vote becomes a part of the constitution. The attorney general holds the amendment became effective Nov. 3 and the office ceased to exist on that date.

In conclusion the attorney general holds that the constitutional amendment abolishing the office of land commissioner has also repealed the other sections of the constitution which make the land commissioner a member of the board of educational lands and funds and repeals that part of the constitution fixing the salary of state land commissioner, since these portions are inconsistent with the amendment, and likewise all sections of the statute inconsistent with the amendment have been repealed.

CHEAPER POWER AN ISSUE

What Keystone Dam Means to Neoraska People.

HASTINGS, Neb.—"The people of Nebraska will now await the decision of the United States supreme court relative to the constitutionality of the act of congress permitting the federal government to render financial assistance in the construction of these public power districts," said President Judkins of the Nebraska state water conservation congress.

"Keystone dam can not be built until this case, brought by five private power utilities doing business in Nebraska, has been decided by the United States supreme court.

"Our people very generally realize that the TVA has been continually opposed by the power trusts. It may be that some of our people have not fully realized that in Nebraska the opposition of the power trusts to the utilization of our waters for the production of cheap electrical power has been a stumbling block in the matter of the conservation and full utilization of our waste waters. The flood waters of Nebraska are worth annually many millions of dollars to our people, if fully used both for irrigation and the production of cheap electrical power, and when we are so badly in need of every advantage that could be gained by the utilization of our flood waters, we should all be deeply interested that no water be permitted to leave this state until it has first rendered every possible service to our people.

"The people of our cities and over 200,000 farmers could be furnished with cheap electrical power by the construction of the Keystone dam."

CITY EXTENSION ON BANKRUPTCY CLAIM

Rebate, If Any, On Payments To Sept. 1, 1937—Sewer Grant Approved.

A resolution approve by the council Monday directed the mayor to sign a supplemental release of its claim against the General Indemnity Corporation of America, upon the express understanding that the claim will be recommended to the supreme court in liquidation and that the city shall receive such payments as the liquidator is authorized to make. The company, before becoming bankrupt, was carrier in the matter of compensation to Clarence E. Abbott, injured municipa gas station employe who received a lifetime award.

Under the supplemental release the insurance department of the state of New York, liquidating the affairs of the company, gives credit to the city to Aug. 31, 1937, at which time $3,727 will have been paid by the municipality for the injury.

Street Commissioner Venner has received word from Senator Burke of approval of a WPA project involving storm sewer construction which concerns the Avery avenue development, stretch recently paved. These sewers are to be constructed in 10th st., T to V, and in V, 9th to 10th. Contract for the city's portion was recently awarded George Vlasnik at $4,317. Forburger Stone company and its president recently filed damage claims for $22,000 because of alleged property damage from prospective flood waters. It is the opinion of the city engineer that sewer construction will properly solve the surface water problem.

The state liquor commission served notice of hearing Dec. 11 of appeal of John Spomer, 225 So. 11th, from the city's revocation of his beer license, revocation, on recommendation of the city attorney, was on the theory that he voluntarily stopped selling beer and that the statute contemplates continuity. The council was further advised, by the state board that it had refused hearing to Alexander Butz, sr., whose license was cancelled, for the reason that he allegedly requested cancellation and that statutory time for appeal has elapsed.

An ordinance introduced on first reading creates a paving district to include C st., 2nd to 6th, under PWA 45 percent grant.

Petitions were received asking that the alley between 12th and 13th and C and D be paved; also suppleemntal petitions requesting creation of a paving district to include Lake, Sheridan to 27th.

LINEMAN RESCUES CAT.

YORK, Neb. (AP) One cat that lost none of its nine lives caused Earl Kerwood, foreman of the Iowa-Nebraska Light & Power company line crew here, a lot of worry and thought.

"Tabby" was found perched atop a high pole, snugly fitted in among a flock of 33,000 volt wires. It wouldn't move. Tabby's owner pleaded with the line crew to bring the cat down. The linemen refused because they had but one life to lose.

A day and a night passed. Kerwood knew that if the cat touched one of the wires, electric service in towns south of York would be disrupted. Another day passed. Tabby sat still. Finally, when service requirements were at a minimum one night, Kerwood switched the service to another line, shinnied up the pole and brought the cat down. It was unhurt but hungry.

STORMS, BITING COLD SWEEP ACROSS NATION

Exposure, Traffic Accidents on Slippery Roads Take Toll of Life.

By United Press.

Winter flung tornadoes, torrential rain, and zero cold across three-fourths of the United States. Government forecasters predicted temperatures ranging from 20 degrees below zero to 20 degrees above for 21 states as a week end resume showed:

Twenty-four persons injured by tornadoes and wind storms in Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas and Texas. Scores of dead in traffic accidents caused by ice and snow. One dead from exposure to cold. One freight ship wrecked and its crew of 25 rescued in Lake Michigan. Fresh water shipping paralyzed by ice in some sections, threatened in others; automobile and airplane traffic impeded.

Government weather experts reported a low of 26 below at Bemidji, Minn. Snow which fell so heavily Sunday it grounded aircraft in Minnesota and the Dakotas lay over most of the middlewest. In Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan and Indiana it melted and froze again to sheathe highways in ice.

As Mrs. Gladys Sheldon, 40, died from the cold near Siren, Wis., fire broke out in a Detroit home being heated against freezing cold. Burned to death were Sarah Lane, 10; Charles Lane, 8; Lillian Lane, 5; Edmund Reuter, 4, and Stanley Reuter, 28.

Nine vessels were trapped in ice jams in the Soulanges canal in Montreal. Coast guard cutters were attempting to keep ice out of the Sault Ste., Marie, Mich., locks and St. Mary's river leading south.

OPINIONS DIFFER ON U. S. ENTRY INTO WAR

Majority Now Think Senators Who Opposed Conflict Were Right.

The six senators who voted against the United States going into the World war were justified, declared a number of Lincoln people, interviewed at random.

Asked their opinion after looking back 20 years, they feel now that American entrance into the war was a mistake. Some opinions.

Superintendent of Schools Lefler: "It is hard to say that something is absolutely right or wrong. But there isn't any evidence that the war made any contribution to the progress of world civilization, and there is a good deal to indicate that a great share of our problems trace their origin to the war."

Mrs. J. Edmunds Miller, head of the League of Women Voters: "The opinion formed 20 years after the war is that the United States should keep clear of war. If anything, I would like to see a stronger neutrality act, altho this nation should always be prepared against attack."

Charles Hoff, president of the junior chamber of commerce: "I think the senators were wrong in voting against war. I think the war was justified."

Rev. Raymond A. McConnell, pastor of First-Plymouth Congregational church: "I think after events show they were wiser than the ones who voted for war, but I think those who urged war acted from their best judgment of what was right or wrong."

Mrs. F. B. Ireland, president of Lincoln Woman's club: "I think they were absolutely right in voting against war."

Rex Brumbaugh, Liberty barber shop: "I think they were right. I feel that the war was unnecessary."

T. B. Strain, president chamber of commerce: "We probably would have been better off if we had never seen the war, altho a lot of our mistakes have been made since then."

H. H. Wilson, attorney: "They were absolutely wrong in voting against war. We either had to fight or take our orders, on the high seas, from the German admiralty. If we had stood idly by, the Germans would have won. Their next move would have been across to America to collect the cost of the war."

A number pointed out that their judgment as to whether the senators were right or wrong in their vote, comes after 20 years in which they have had an opportunity to weigh the results of the war.

Senator Norris was one of the six who voted against the conflict.

MALLON

WASHINGTON.—Re organization, developing within the new deal, is not the kind that was advertised. The cabinet is holding on to its chairs with grim determination. But down in the subcabinet strata, the tendency to roam has spread so extensively since election that it has become a movement. The men who are going are expert assistants or anonymous brain trusters who reallly do the work for which the big names receive credit. Their departures are heralded with no more than a paragraph in the papers, if anything. But, collectively, their exodus, if continued, could very easily alter the efficiency of the president's second redeal.

The president's advisers are worried and will get him to do something as soon as he returns from South America.

During the past week three such departures were announced. One was a cotton expert, an assistant director, in the agricultural department; the second, an assistant administrator in rural rehabilitation, and the third a assistant general counsel in the treasury. It was not these three particular withdrawals, but others now pending and yet to be announced, which are considered of great importance by those who are trying to hold the new deal together.

Further expected withdrawals range all the way from an executive assistant to the administrator in agriculture to a presidential secretary and valuable technical assistants in important positions with the PWA and RFC.

Nearly all are going into private business to make some money.

The Pennsylvania delegation came out for Mr. Rayburn as house floor leader because of inside information that he is the administration choice. As a matter of fact, he is more than that. He is President Roosevelt's own private choice.

Boss Guffey of Pennsylvania, who swung the delegation, will undoubtedly get the reputation of king maker, but it was Vice-President Garner who negotiated the inside deal and gave Senator Guffey the opportunity.

Most significant, however, was the fact that Pat Boland, democratic whip and good friend of Rayburn5s opponent made a speech supporting Rayburn at the Pennsylvania caucus. Mr. Boland fought Guffey thruout the last session on patronage and other matters.

These developments unveil the handwriting on the wall of the house for the coming session of congress. Mr. Roosevelt is the big boss, bigger than he has ever been before and probably bigger than any president ever has been. Anyone who aspires to be a little boss will need a white house okay.

The "constitutional crisis" which Premier Baldwin has been broadcasting about has left newsreaders around here in confusion. Some thought he must be referring to his own constitution, or the king's, as the government has none.

Britons here explain the word "constitutional" is a British government colloquialism. It means any government crisis which is not political, that is, not an issue between political parties.

The hard guess of some Britons has been that Mrs. Simpson would solve the crisis herself in the end, if she discovered her suitor was no longer a king. However, Edward's social position, even in private life, would be equal to that of any in the world, and his privy purse would keep him from selling pencils for a long time.

Without announcement, a new hot dog boy has joined the new deal straight from the Frankfurter grinder at the Harvard law school. He is young John Wheeler, son of the Montana senator, who has become an assistant counsel in the senatorial investigation which his father is conducting into railroad financing malpractices. Young Wheeler is even more energetically liberal than his father, which means he is extremely energetic. Anti-nepotists probably will not howl much about this one.

The way foreign nations are getting around Mr. Roosevelt's war-plane embargo was disclosed in the latest official figures on commercial plane purchases. The Russians bought $1,000,000 worth of air transports here last month, the Japanese $600,000. It is well known here that the fencing Russians and Japanese are not going to use these air buses for sightseeing.

All that is needed to make them fighting ships are a few machine gun racks. They will probably be used to move troops.

The A. T. & T. rate cut probably will not keep congress from authorizing funds for continuance of this most expensive investigation ever held. Instead, the cut will be used as an inducement for continuing the inquiry. In February, the investigators will run out of the $1,150,000 already furnished.

Acting State Secretary Moore, who bowed to cupid in modifying the alien marriage ban, is a bachelor, 76 years old.

"FRILLS" NOT COSTLY.

YORK, Neb.—Wayne Soper, former York college student now head of the educational research department of the New York state educational department, told his hearers at a meeting in Albany that "cutting out the frills" such as medical inspection health work and so on, would reduce the cost of education only about 5 percent. His talk was in answer to complaints made that it is such extras that make education in high schools cost so much.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM WILL BE CONSIDERED

Johnson, Head of League for That End, Seeks Constitutional Amendment

BY DAVID LAWRENCE.

WASHINGTON (Copyright) A most remarkable meeting occurred here in the last few days remarkable because it illustrates pointedly that discussion of the most important problems of government sometimes attracts little or no attention No comprehensive report of the meeting was published thruout the country tho the press was of course, invited to report the affair

Everybody is agreed nowadays that government rightly or wrongly is taking over more and more responsibility, but apparently few people realize as yet that the personnel in government must be equal to the increased responsibilities now being imposed

Gathered in the meeting were the principal directors of personnel in all the government departments the men who know something about qualified personnel and what has been called the "merit system" as distinguished from the hit-or-miss method of making appointments by political pull wherein merit is frequently disregarded and party service is rewarded

All the members of the United States civil service commission were present and some distinguished persons outside the government service too as, for instance, Louis Brownlow of the public administration clearing house of Chicago and Luther Gulick of the national institute of public administration All present were interested in the merit system and the meeting was held under the auspices of the school of public affairs of American university, which has about 900 government officials enrolled in special courses devoted to the technique of public administration

But the particular reason for the gathering was to hear an address by the new president of the national civil service reform league, Robert L Johnson of New York.

Now, ordinarily, an address about the merit system is considered by the press in Washington as just one of a number of these speeches on reform that finds itself colliding with the proverbial stone wall

Civil Service Reform.

But Mr Johnson who has been drafted for leadership in the national civil service reform league by public spirited citizens interested in that cause, is not the type who butts his head against stone walls As vice president and advertising director of the periodicals issued by Time-Fortune Incorporated, he has had a successful experience and now he has turned his energies to the making of a civil service reform movement that should really get somewhere

Mr Johnson has been anxious to make a contribution to public service and two years ago obtained leave of absence from his regular work to accept the invitation of Gov Earle of Pennsylvania to serve as relief administrator of that state for a year He was particularly won over by the need of civil service reform by his experiences in Pennsylvania

'When I arrived in Pennsylvania he told the meeting of personnel directors here 'I found I was in charge of some 14,000 employes and that we were distributing $20,000,000 a month The size of the organization and the amount of money involved made it imperative for me to have able well trained executives in the central office and in every one of the 670 branch offices thruout the state

'After quite a search in private industry I managed to find an outstanding personnel expert The man's first job was to classify every type of work done in our organization, from the administrator down to the file clerk Then each person in our organization had to be rated according to his ability to perform his particular job An examination system was set up not only to weed out the inefficient but also to let in from the outside the best talent available

During that year in relief and since I have talked with a large number of public administrators who have been handicapped by politically fostered personnel problems They have also been practically unanimous in stating that the general efficiency of their organizations was definitely impaired by the inefficiency of unqualified employes

Sports System Weakness

'When I left Pennsylvania I had one dominating conviction namely that the spoils system is the greatest single weakness of our government today

Most of the men and women who are at this meeting are trying to develop sound methods of administering government That work of course I think we all acknowledge as of first importance On the other hand, I feel there is a place for the national civil service reform league as interpreter between the government and the public It is your job to build government personnel along the right lines It is our job to see that the public understands and supports and demands extension of your work

One part of our program that of a federal constitutional amendment, has I believe caused some concern in governmental circles This is of course understandable because if the league were going to put its whole force behind an amendment at this time it might conceivably interfere with any constructive plans for legislation in the next session of congress. The league, however has proposed this amendment only as a long term principle I know that it may take years to put it over At this moment it is not our prime objective and we will back sound bills in congress regardless of whether or not the constitutional amendment is introduced

'The reason behind our belief in an eventual amendment to the constitution is to make sure that future congresses may not set aside any constructive legislation that is likely to be passed in the near future Without such a bulwark the merit system in all probability will be raided time and again The history of civil service legislation and constitutional amendments in the several states has shown us the weakness of the legislative act as a guardian of the merit system Of course even with a constitutional amendment exceptions may be made, but there could be no wholesale exemptions of departments and agencies

Question of Teeth.

"Since we brought up the question of a constitutional amendment a number of people interested in our work have questioned whether or not the amendment as proposed, has enough teeth It reads Appointments and promotions in the civil service of the United States shall be made according to merit and fitness to be ascertained so far as practicable by examination

"It may appear weak but it is a part of an identical amendment in the New York state constitution an dthe New York amendment has demonstrated itself to be most effective Fully 98 percent of the New York state personnel is now under the merit system Charles Evans Hughes once stated that the New York civil service amendment was the most important constitutional provision since the bill of rights."

I have quoted from Mr Johnson's speech because it represents the expression of a young man earnestly endeavoring to do his bit in public service after having witnessed and felt in Pennsylvania the pressure of the spoils system Here is a man who now feels he can devote much of his time to a movement which seeks the eradication of such evils in federal, state and city government

It will be interesting to watch this new leadership of the national civil service reform league an organization that resulted originally from a spontaneous demand just after the assassination of President Garfield Will the movement now receive the public support it deserves, as the spoilsmen in congress press for passage bill after bill specifically exempting personnel from the requirements of a merit system of civil service?

There are plenty of people inside the government who know the crying need for civil service reform but it is the people on the outside who do not That's why it is disappointing to find the press generally overlooking an important meeting in the interest of the merit system in government

CITY OFFICIALS OF ONE CITY ERECTED A WAR MEMORIAL SHOWING A SOLDIER RAGGED, DIRTY, WEATHER-BEATEN, DEPRESSED INSTEAD OF IN A HEROIC ATTITUDE AND FINE UNIFORM YOUR OPINION

Author's note Answers are from the scientific viewpoint Not all moral questions can be answered with absolute scientific accuracy, but no decision as to what is morally right is possible without science. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals

1, Bosh' You and I had about as much to do with "selecting Mr Roosevelt or Mr Landon as we did in selecting the proper site for nature to locate Niagara Falls Even to maintain that the delegates to the conventions selected the candidates or that the conventions were deliberative bodies are merely pious wish-fancies of the subconscious The voters merely choose between the candidates selected for them

2 In her penetrating book 'The Art of Being a Woman,' Olga Knopf says 'It is strange to see people marry and keep their money separately They are willing to trust their future their happiness and their life to the partner—but not their money It means of course that money is over valued and that there is not real confidence in such marriages ' Dr Knopf's doctrine is all well and good so long as there is genuine love and trust and money is regarded as the instrument to forward the happiness of both But, as she says, when they keep their money separate, it means they never had complete trust in each other or else have lost it

3 I agree heartily with Dorothy Dunbar Bromley in the New York Telegram that the artist has used his chisel in showing how war degrades a man As one leading veteran said who went thru the war, 'There was nothing beautiful about war This statue is alive It shows when you put a gun in a man's hands it makes him a brute" As Miss Bromley says the men who have been thru war have no illusions about its beauty—to them it is only the red ugliness of hell.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE.

The Rattlesnake stood swaying and considering his fallen companion.

Two men, singing with liquor, approached. They came up to the Rattlesnake. They stopped.

"Sing, hombre," commanded one of them to the Rattlesnake. "Can you not sing?"

"Surely I can—sing," said the Rattlesnake. "Listen." He opened his mouth and began "La Paloma."

"He's the man we want," said Pepito. "He can sing. Come along, Rodrigo. We are going to sing. To sing and drink tequila. You are certain you can sing?"

The Rattlesnake swore.

"Come on," he stuttered. "Wherever—you—going. I'll show you—whether I can sing—." He seized them by their arms, got between them, peered at each face. "Never mind," he told himself. "I don't know you. But you sing—and drink." He began La Paloma again.

And thus Pepito and Jose brought the Rattlesnake to Shane O'Hara, awaiting them at Jose's cousin's ramshackle garage.

* * * *

A golden sun glinting across the dessert country south of Tijuana threw a shaft of light into the window of a small adobe house on an eastern hillside, illuminating thereby a ten-foot square chamber, white-walled, containing a rickety iron bed on which a bound man strained against the cords which held him, cursed wildly, and stared about him with eyes red from tequila and vicious from astonishment.

The Rattlesnake's awakening had been most unpleasant.

Assuredly now, he told himself, when consciousness began first to come, this is only a dream from which I will presently awaken. Many times I have bad dreams, after drinking, and this is only another one of them. What a thirst! I wonder if there is water after the dream goes away?

But the dream, instead of going away, became clearer and clearer, each part more vivid. Until at last it came to the Rattlesnake that this was no tequila-dream, but some horrid truth.

He could not move. There were ropes about him. Yes, he could see the knots. And his wrists were tied. Not only tied together, but tied to a rope which passed between his legs. He raised his arms; the cursed rope pulled around his neck—it ran from his wrists between his legs and up his back, then was noosed around his neck. Struggle would choke him to death. His feet would not move; tied, too.

Nevertheless—but cautiously—he raised his head and chest. But as he could see no more that way than without rising, he relaxed again.

"This is not the jail," he told himself, noting the ordinary wooden door, closed. His eyes sought the window. No bars. But from just outside it came a casual whistling—"La Paloma."

The Rattlesnake listened to the whistling for a moment. His head ached terribly. His throat was aflame. He must have water, or he would die. Water and a drink of tequila. What had happened last night? He was with friends, at the Cafe Espanol, he recalled. They had spent all evening there, half the night. Then some of them had gone away. He had remained. He and—and who? Somebody, because they had left the cafe together. Singing, too. Yes, he remembered: they had gone forth singing that cursed song that somebody was now whistling outside the window. And then—then what? Blank. Until now. His head! His throat! Assuredly he was dying, or what dead and in the anteroom of hell. Funny, it had never occurred to him before that hell might be built along the same lines as Baja California. But why not? Take water away, flames would be unnecessary.

Then his rambling, jumbled thoughts whisked to another question. Certainly the devil never tied up his victims; he didn't have to. No; he was not dead. Not yet; altho assuredly he would be if water was not forthcoming soon. But who—what mangy curs—had dared to truss up him, the Rattlesnake, like a calf to be branded?

Swiftly he thought of his enemies—and he had many. But this was not what they would do to him, if they could catch him. No; there would have been no question as to whether he was dead or not, in that case. But they were not Tijuana people; all his enemies were in Mexicali, Ensenada—maybe one or two in Tecate. Not here.

His throat! Aflame! And his head, bursting. He opened his mouth and shouted.

"Water!" he cried. "You who whistle there! Water, for the love of heaven!"

The whistling stopped. Footsteps, unhurried. The face of Jose, handkerchief in place, appeared at the window. Looked at the figure of the Rattlesnake with cold and considering eyes.

"You make a lot of noise, hombre," Jose told him.

"Water!" groaned the Rattlesnake. "Water, water. . . . And who are you? And what am I tied up for? Am I—." His voice broke. "Water," he gasped.

"There is no water," said Jose, calmly. "And I do not think there will ever be any water."

"What!" screamed the Rattlesnake. "You refuse me a drink? You will let me die here? Who are you? What—what does it mean?"

"Ask yourself," said Jose, shrugging. He turned, left, the window resumed whistling as he sat down beneath a stunted tree. In a little while now. . . .

Every drinker knows the torture of being unable to get a drink. Had there been a bottle or tequila within sight of the Rattlesnake, or had he been free to seek one, he would have had only a slight discomfort—because relief was only a matter of time. But being tied up, no drink possible, he lost his nerve. His craving increased a hundredfold. Tequila. He must have a drink of tequila. Just one.

And on top of this came something far worse.

With one of those queer transitions which afflict the human mind in pain or terror, it was suddenly not tequila that the Rattlesnake wanted, had to have, would die without—but water.

Pictures thronged his delirium. Glasses of water. Pitchers of water. Canteens. Wells, running brooks, little lakes dancing like mirages.

M'INTYRE

NEW YORK.—Diary: A merry cable from the E. D. Coblentzes and Will Hayses in Italy. So out in a nippy gale and passed Nella Webb, the astrology lady. And thru the park and up Broadway stopping in the Ansonia to see Theodore Dreiser and later to call on Jean Douglas, the poet lady.

At my stint until Georges Hiat, a Paris journalist, came and he described the war situation in Europe as " a mere touching of pawns with no major moves." Later with my lady to River House to Christie MacDonald's tea and she as lovely as in her starring days.

Lucy Virginia Long to dinner and I told her how Irwin Cobb thought her name so pretty he had so named a character in his radio program. And then took her to the tram for Greenwich and came upon Genevieve Cooper, theater bound, Courtney being off on a lecture tour.

The vast change in the standing of the professional pug is among the social phenomena of the period. Once a champion was hailed chiefly in the saloons and at sporting events and wound up running a bar whose clientele was chiefly gamblers. Today Jack Dempsey addresses women's clubs, speaks at notable banquets and is often a polished figure in the drawing rooms. Tony Canzoneri is another regarded and hailed as a perfect type of little gentleman—welcome everywhere on Broadway. What many do not realize is that the person who put boxing on such a high plane and kept it there is the fighter perhaps least seen of all—Gene Tunney. Carl Hubbell and Lou Gehrig are doing the same thing for baseball.

Personal nomination for the hummiest of the recent tunes: Jerome Kerns's "The Way You Look Tonight!"

Most cinema ladies who breeze into town from Hollywood toss out interviews that are 18 karat blah. But I snagged this from the metropolitan born Sylvia Sidney, who gave as excuse for her arrival: "I wanted to see the leaves turn."

In one of the brighter cafes a recent dinner hour, too, I noticed the Talmadge trio—Norma, Constance and Natalie. The world grows older but they seemingly do not. They are still a startling resemblance to the three Brooklyn girls who made such a triple impress on the movies of the day. The tradition is to be carried on by Natalie's son, whose daddy was long the No. 1 Dead Pan—Buster Keaton.

Memories: Grandma's name, "shims," for any dish a bit mysterious. And when we plagued her for advance news of Christmas gifts she'd tell us mysteriously to expect a "silver wait awhile" and a "golden nixie." It would set us crazy.

Charlie Hughes relays J. P. McEvoy's grand gag brought back from the orient. A Chinese schoolboy was asked by his school teacher to tell who Tallyrand was. "An American fan dancer," answered the modern oriental, "and you can cut out that baby talk, too."

MRS. L. A. ARTHUR DIES

Daughter of Pioneer, Wife of Retired Pastor.

OMAHA. (AP). Word was received here of the death of Mrs. L. A. Arthur, 63, daughter of a pioneer Grand Island family, in Minneapolis after an illness of several weeks. The former May McAllister of Grand Island, she served as president of the Grand Island unit of the Red Cross during the World war. Surviving are her husband, Rev. L. A. Arthur, retired rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal church in Grand Island, and a stepdaughter, Mrs. William Ritchie of Omaha. Services will be held Tuesday at St. Stephen's church in Grand Island.

All the world's a stage, and the current attraction is ten-twenty-thirt' melodrama.

We can't get over Peggy Joyce finding herself engaged to a professor. Maybe they were both absent minded.

Not much can be said for the nazi ban on critics of the drama, but a purge of Monday morning quarterbacks would find us warming up to Adolf.

By Irvin S. Cobb

SANTA MONICA, Calif.—To get the true value of this little fable, we have to reverse Mr. Aesop:

Once upon a time, the frogs grew dissatisfied with their imperial overlord. They were very conservative frogs, living always by the rules, and it upset them to have a ruler who knew what he wanted and liked to have his own way and once in awhile told some large overstuffed frog to quit bothering him and go take a long running jump.

Accordingly, they traded off sprightly King Stork for dull King Log, who'd never sported any new ideas—nur nothin'—and never would. So they all lived happily ever afterward, especially ex-King Stork, who learned to like southern cooking and went about hither and yon as free as a bird, and made new friends everywhere, for he was a jolly good fellow, which nobody could deny.

Moral: The reader will kindly write his own ticket, in case the above should come to pass.

TO USE PIPE LINE FROM TEAPOT DOME

Reconditioning Longest Gravity Line Recalls Oil Industry Scandal.

CASPER, Wyo. (UP). Out of the ashes of the Teapot Dome scandal that rocked the nation 14 years ago, arises one of the oil industry's major developments, a 750-mile pipeline from Teapot, Wyo., to Freeman, Mo.

Leasing of the naval petroleum reserve No. 3, better known as Teapot Dome, to Harry Sinclair and associates brought charges of bribery, conspiracy and treason in 1922-23 against high officials and shocked the administration of Warren Harding. On the basis of that lease the huge pipe line project was started. Hardly had it been placed in operation, however, than the scandal broke and the line was abandoned as an oil carrier. Its western section, from Clayton, Wyo., to Bridgeport, Neb., was leased to the Northern Utilities company as a trunk line gas-carrier to furnish natural gas to communities in eastern Wyoming and nnorthern Nebraska.

Three circumstances recently decided Standard Oil of Indiana to resurrect the world's longest gravity flow pipeline, and it is being reconditioned at a cost of $1,000,000. When finished the line will send Rocky Mountain crude oil to refineries, which in turn will send the finished product to all parts of the world. The three circumstances were listed as follows:

Wyoming tax officials hiked the tax on 12,000,000 barrels of oil stored at Standard's Clayton, Wyo., tank farm.

Ohio Oil company brought in prolific 40 degree gravity crude production from the basal Sundance sand near the Standard lines.

Oil observers are growing apprehensive at the failure to bring in new oil strikes of major significance in areas near seaport transportation and near midwestern refining centers. The day is approaching, it was believed, when the oil industry must look to the Rocky mountain area with its more than 3,000,000 barrels daily.

FLEE TO STREET.

DETROIT, (AP) Thirty residents, many in night clothing, fled into the street in near-zero temperature when fire destroyed the New Bridge hotel. Three alarms brought several companies of firemen who fought the blaze under severe handicap as the water turned to ice in the street as it fell.

BURKE OFF TO CAPITAL

Suggests Three Possible Constitutional Amendments.

OMAHA, (AP) Senator Burke left for Washington, where he will confer with other senators on matters pertaining to the coming session of congress, opening Jan. 5.

In a discussion of constitutional amendments that may come before congress, Senator Burke said he expected Senator Norris would press for an amendment providing an act of congress cannot be declared invalid by the supreme court by less than a two-thirds majority of the court.

Senator Burke, a member of the senate judiciary committee, did not feel favorable toward passage of such an amendment. He thought it likely an NRA amendment would be brought out. He did not, however, believe the suggestion would come direct from the president, but would instead be put forward by "interested groups." Such an amendment possibly would provide for government regulation of production, as well as wages and hours.

A third amendment putting all government employes under civil service may be advanced by the civil service league, he said. Senator Burke predicted that if these three amendments are proposed, there would be "serious action" in favor of their passage.

TRAINS GO DESPITE COLD

Year's First Snap Hardest On Rolling Records

When the first cold snap of the year strikes, as every railroadman knows, it means a day or two of tough going on the line. But in Lincoln, an official said Monday morning, things have moved along in good shape this year, despite the sudden onslaught of the chilly wave.

A few trains, especially those that come a long distance, have been a little late, but none have been delayed very long. In cold weather the equipment is more liable to injury. On frosty mornings small pieces of steel may snap like glass under a slight impact. Brake rods and couplings that have served staunchly thru the summer often crack without warning. Rails, too, sometimes crack.

Oil moves slowly, it is difficult to get up steam, and numb fingers move just a little less numbly than in summer. Later in the winter all these difficulties are hardly noticed. It's in the first cold spell that things are tough.

Nasal Sinus Ailment Is Curable

Chronic Disorder Can Be Avoided by Early Care, Says Copeland

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

THIS IS the time of the year when those who have a tendency to head colds and nasal sinusitis are likely to suffer frequent attacks. Sudden changes in weather and temperature increase the danger of sinusitis. It is especially prevalent among those who are exposed to dampness and cold.

Sinusitis, as its name indicates, is an inflammation of the nasal sinuses. The nasal sinuses are a group of air cells located in the bones forming the nose. These cells or cavities open into the inside of the nose by small openings or passageways.

Since the sinuses are lined with warm mucous membrane and carry a certain amount of moisture, they mak ideal breeding places for germs which rapidly multiply in them. These germs pass into the cavities from the nose and throat; or they may come from diseased tonsils or running ears. If the lining membrane becomes inflamed or infected, there results congestion and obstruction, with the appearance of the usual symptoms of sinusitis.

Headache and Pain

The sufferer complains of severe headache and pain in the face. Occasionally pus oozes into the nose and drops into the throat, later reaching the stomach. This may lead to digestive disturbances. In an occasional case, the pus actually may reach the lungs and set up serious trouble there.

At times the symptoms may not be severe, the sufferer complaining only of a mild but constant headache. He may notice a loss of appetite, loss of weight and a feeling of being below par. Presence of these symptoms, obscure as they are, should arouse suspicion of sinusitis. In every such case, to confirm the diagnosis, an x-ray should be taken of the nasal sinuses.

I am often asked whether nasal sinusitis can be cured. This is possible when medical measures are speedily applied. Complete recovery can be assured if the condition is prevented from becoming chronic. When it has existed for a long time, it is probable it can be corrected only by operation.

Bear in mind that children as well as adults suffer from this disease. In children it may lead to anemia, malnutrition, asthma, digestive disturbances, St. Vitus' dance, acute rheumatic fever, arthritis and other serious disturbances.

If you are the victim of sinusitis I advise you to consult with your physician. Do not be content to let the condition remain untreated.

HELD FOR TORTURING WIFE

Jailed Without Bail for Burning With Matches.

NEW YORK, (AP). Alfred Mansfield, burly 39-year old automobile scrapper of North Baldwin, L. I., was held without bail for the grand jury after police said he admitted torturing his diminutive wife with lighted matches in an effort to make her confess indiscretions. Police Detective Bert Bedell of Baldwin said that Manstield, six foot, 200-pound Australian, confessed to placing lighted matches under his wife's fingernails last Friday and beating her with a razor strap.

The prisoner's wife and mother of three children, Mrs. Rose Mansfield, was quoted by Bedell as saying in the last two years she had told her husband of fancied infidelities to protect herself from torture.

THE MOST VIOLENT KILLER OF THE SOUTHWEST—John Wesley Hardin was born in Bonham, Fannin county, Texas, in 1853, the son of a Methodist preacher.

At the age of 15, he killed a liberated Negro slave named Mage. Shortly after, he killed three soldiers who were trying to capture him for this crime. By 1877, when he had attained the age of 24 years, he had killed 44 men, 9 of them for snoring. In that year he was finally brought to justice. He was convicted of second degree murder and was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary. He was released in 1894. Within a year, he was killed in a barroom brawl at El Paso while his back was turned. A year later his slayer, an El Paso policeman named Selman, was in turn slain by George Scarborough, an ex-sheriff.

Married Comrades

IF DICKY had any unfavorable reaction to Allen Drake's smiling reference, he gave no outward sign of it. But as I nervously muttered, "I'll hurry back to Mrs Ticer", in obedience to Allen Drake's implied command, my husband sent an emphatic call after me.

"It's all right to soothe Mrs. Ticer's nerves," he said, "but don't you put a foot outside this house unless I'm with you."

Whether the concern in his voice was real or assumed for the benefit of the rest, it sounded genuine, and it warmed my heart immeasurably.

"I'll remember," I called back, and did not realize that my answer was evasive until he spoke in louder tones:

"See that you act as well as remember." With an answering call of assent I sped back to the study.

Mrs. Ticer and Harry Underwood were standing facing each other, and Mrs. Ticer was saying nervously:

"Where's Mis' Graham? She was the one I was telling this to."

Waits for Madge

Her eyes were roving to the door as she spoke, and when they caught my hurried entrance she drew a long breath of relief.

"There she is now," she said. "Now I'll talk."

Ordinarily, I knew that Harry Underwood's sense of humor would have found food for laughing comment in this stubbornness, but now the lines around his mouth were grim, and his words held impatient command.

"Have her make it snappy, Madge," he said. "I haven't time to fool around."

I slipped a reassuring hand under Mrs. Ticer's arm.

"Better ask questions," I said to him in a low voice, for I had chagrined remembrances of difficulties I had experienced in getting my voluble neighbor to stick to her text.

Questions Her

His eyes flashed comprehending assent at me. Then he turned them piercingly upon my neighbor.

"You say you saw a dead man? Where?"

"Up in the woods, near the shack."

"How long ago?"

"Just a few minutes. Me and Jerry hurried over here as fast as we could after we had seen him."

"You're sure those men are gone for good?"

"They drove away awful fast, Jerry said, and they had all their traps with 'em. The shack looks like a hurrah's nest, too—things tossed down every which way, coffee pot upset and coffee spilled out, just a mess everywhere."

Mrs. Ticer's nose was uptilted in good housewifely disdain, but Harry Underwood had no time to waste upon her reactions to disorder.

Shudders at Query

"Did you touch the body? What did he look like?"

Mrs. Ticer shuddered.

"No; we didn't touch it. And I can't tell much what he looked like. He was lying with his face on the ground, and he was kind of tall and heavy."

The lines around Harry Underwood's mouth etched themselves more deeply.

"It could be Grimby," he said, as if to himself. Then he shot his last question at her.

"Could you find the spot again without losing any time hunting?"

Mrs. Ticer's reply was equally prompt.

"Oh, yes. I can go straight to it."

"Then come with me. Hurry!" he said imperatively.

But Mrs. Ticer hung back.

"I don't go a step without Mis' Graham," she said firmly.

FIVE PERISH IN FLAMES

Frame Residence at Detroit Is Destroyed

DETROIT, (AP). Police and fire inspectors blamed an overheated furnace for a fire which swept a two-story frame residence killing five persons, including four small children. Eight other members of the same family were injured, four seriously. Dead were Sarah Lane, 10; her eight year old brother, Charles, and a sister, Lillian, five; her brother-in-law, Stanley Reuter, 28, and his son, Edmund Reuter, four.

Harry Lane, 40 year old house painter and father of three of the victims, rescued several members of his household but was the only one to escape injury. He said his wife fixed the furnace shortly before the fire broke out Sunday morning.

Mrs. Lillian Lane, 43 year old mother, was in serious condition from burns suffered when she was trapped with the others after she ran to the second floor of the home to warn them of the fire.

Surprise Is Nice on Birthday

Goodnight Stories

By MAX TRELL

"HELLO, TING-A-LING," Knarf and Hanid said to their Chinese friend. He lived inside the blue Chinese plate that stood on the dining room table. "What are you doing?" they asked.

"Writing a letter."

"Oh, how nice. Is it somebody's birthday?" Hanid said.

"Just mine," said Ting-a-Ling. "I'm writing this letter to myself."

"That's pretty funny," Knarf said.

"Funny? Why, it isn't at all funny. I like to receive birthday letters, don't you?"

"Of course."

"Well, I'm writing this letter to myself so I'll be sure to receive one on my birthday. I'll be glad to get it . . . very glad."

"Yes," said Hanid. "I think that's a very good idea."

"Here, let me read it to you. It starts off: Dear Ting-a-Ling—"

That's All There Is

"What's after that?" the two shadows wanted to know.

"I haven't written any more than that. I can't think of what to say."

"Say that you hope you have a pleasant birthday."

Ting-a-Ling shook his head. "No, that would give everything away. I want it to be a surprise."

"Oh, I have an idea!" said Knarf. "Don't write any letter at all. That is the best thing you could do."

"I'm writing this to myself."

Ting-a-Ling smiled. "You're right. I won't send myself a letter. Instead I'll pay myself a visit. That will be much better. It's always jollier to have company than to get a letter. I'll bake a big birthday cake and put up a lantern and get a sprig of cherry blossoms and give myself a birthday present—a surprise birthday present. I'll buy it with my eyes shut."

And Knarf and Hanid felt very glad that Ting-a-Ling was so happy. They wished him a very, very happy birthday. Don't you think that was nice?

YOUR PROBLEMS

By Mary Gordon

Dear Mary Gordon: In your problems of Nov. 24th I read the letter from R. B. I did not see the letter from "Sophisticated" so this letter may not fit into the discussion. I just have an idea that "Sophisticated" said some Christian people were "Gold Bricks." I can see why a great many people who think they are religious can well be called "Gold Bricks" because it is only surface appearance. There are a lot of people who slip into their religion on Sunday morning just as they put on their best clothes and when night comes they hang up their religion with their Sunday go to meeting clothes, they act as if they were afraid they would wear it out. Thru the week they will tell mean things about their neighbors and if they can beat him in any deal they do it. But when Sunday comes they go back to church and when they hear the words, "Bear not false witness against thy neighbor" and "Love Thy Neighbor as Thy Self" they bow their heads and say "Amen."

If you call that religion it must be the "Gold Brick" kind. But things like this do happen in all churches. No matter what church you attend you can always find some "gold bricks" or just plain hypocrites.

Since we are talking of bricks let us compare religion to a large brick building. First of all the foundation must be placed on the solid rock or "God." Then comes the foundation, Christ and His Teachings. Now it will take many to build this great building so Christ puts many to work and calls them ministers.

These ministers are of many nations and many creeds yet there is plenty of work for all on our great building (religion).

Since the ministers are the masons they select their own material and each individual is just a brick in the finished structure.

This structure when finished will have many rooms (creeds) but since all are similar in many ways and all resting on the same foundation (Christ) and under one roof (religion) it will be a structure that will endure the storms of ages.

As the masons select their bricks they find many that are porous, others which were not baked to the hardness durability calls for. He thinks he will cast them aside as useless, then he hears the voice of the Great Contractor saying there is a place for every brick and "Judge Ye Not Lest Ye be Judged." So the mason slips these useless bricks into place and covers them well with the mortar of "charity" trusting that the stronger bricks on either side will give the weak one the support it needs.

As our building progresses the beautiful stained glass windows are set in place thru which the beautiful light of righteous abor shines, so you see "R. B." the righteous have not labored in vain, for the light of righteousness has the power to penetrate the darkest places on this old earth. And it is that ray of light that attracts many to our edifice.

As the sun is in the west we must hasten with our work for when the Master left he said he would return, but not even the angels in heaven know when.

We will use for the rafters good deeds and shingle the whole with kind words.

We will gather the gold from each creed then the emblem "The Cross" we will form and raise it high on the spire and hope when "The Master" returns He will say "Well Done Thou Good and Faithful Servants." Our structure is finished the motto over the huge doors reads, —"Salvation is free; All are welcome, the rich and the poor."

As the multitude gather about the door of our edifice (religion) they find the golden key (Love) is in the lock. But the key is easy to turn an dthe great doors swing open and there stands the Judge. He points to the word on the threshold, "tolerance." So you see no one can enter the real religious spirit unless he has toerance with his fellow man.

There is no religion when one creed is not tolerant with other creeds because there are many many creeds and only one God.—A Useless Brick.

A. Anyone who can make such telling comparisons is surely far from what your signature would indicate.

Dear Mary Gordon: Boy I guess "Sting" sure got the girls told didn't he? Oh yes I'm a girl but I'm not modern by any means. I'm 25 years old, never drank or smoked. My husband used to take me in his arms and say, "You are the sweetest girl I know—you know honey the reason I married you was because you don't drink or smoke." But he left me for a smoking, drinking giddy headed girl who had the guts to come to my home and ask for my husband to take her to a dance or any place she wanted to go.

Is it any wonder I despise blond, painted, dizzy females?

But I'm a good sport, if I can't hold my man let some one else do it.

And now I'm alone. Should I change and be like other girls and win men or stay like I am and get stung. P. S. I don't think I'll change but would you blame me if I did?—Stung Twice.

A. We shall leave the answer to our readers.

PENETRO NOSE DROPS

And so, I'VE BECOME A MEMBER of THE I·O·F·

I'm 23, married, and father of the world's most beautiful baby.

The week Bimbo came, Dad said to me: "Son, you've got a family of your own now. It's a big responsibility. You may not feel it now, but you will as you go on."

"I certainly do feel it, Dad," I replied. "If I should happen to fall sick or something—gee! . . ."

"That's what I meant," Dad went on. "My suggestion is that you come into the Independent Order of Foresters. Sign up for Sickness and Disability and Old Age Benefits . . . There's no better time to get started than right now!"

Well, I took Dad's advice. And believe me, it's the best thing I ever did. I've got the I.O.F.'s Family Protection to keep the worry-wrinkles off my forehead. I've found the best bunch of fellows to get together with. And I'm getting a real kick out of Fraternal Work. It broadens a man's outlook on life.

So, the advice I'm handing out to other young fellows is just this:

FACTS ABOUT THE I.O.F.

GRANTLAND RICE'S Sportlight

© 1936 BY NEA SERVICE, INC. THE LINCOLN JOURNAL AND OTHER NEWSPAPERS

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Football still is a game in which inspiration is a big factor. The players can be fired for a great effort on a given day, and, if their spirit is sufficiently robust, it will endure thru 60 minutes of play in which they are likely to outdo themselves.

But underlying that spirit must be good physical condition and a lot of sound football sense. Plus these two, spirit very often will make the difference between the two contending teams. But not spirit alone. Not any more. The game has advanced to a point where a coach no longer can take a poorly equipped team, give it a fight talk and see it come thru against a well drilled, physically fit team, which also has some spirit of its own. The will to die for dear old whozsis or the memory of a departed hero or even—as may be the case for the coach's job, can be badly dented by a hard charging enemy line and a set of backs who know how to follow their blockers.

Take the Harvard team that came up so strongly as the season moved along, recovering from a bad beating by Army and then going on to tie Princeton and take Yale right down to the last gasp before the decision went to Kelley, Frank & Co. That Harvard team had plenty of spirit. But it also was a well coached team that matured under fire. Dick Harlow, one of the ablest coaches in the country, taught the boys a lot of first rate football. They couldn't absorb it in a hurry, but, by hammering away at it, they finally got the hang of it. That was when they started to go places.

THE GEORGIA SURGE.

Jim Crowley said after the Fordham-Georgia game that he never saw a more inspired team than the Toy Bulldogs from Athens were that day at the Polo Grounds. Fordham was headed for the Rose Bowl, but Georgia came piling up out of the south and fought the Ram so tenaciously that it got a tie and, quite likely, paved the way for Fordham's subsequent defeat by N. Y. U.

Spirit? Inspiration? Sure. Georgia had plenty of both, along with a desire to keep Harry Mehre on the job as coach, since some of the more obstreperous members of the alumni were beginning to make threatening gestures in his direction. But Georgia had come up for that game the hard way. It had learned bitter lessons while it was being battered by southern rivals early in the season. It had learned how to take it, which, in football, as in fighting or any other game, counts heavily. The week before it had shown no little progress by beating Tulane.

Georgia also was in a favorable spot because Fordham had to win the game—had to do all the leading. The spot called for clear thinking on the part of the Bulldogs. They had their heads up all thru that game. If they hadn't, they could have had all the spirit in the world and it wouldn't have saved them from disaster when they began to trade smashes with Fordham's powerful forward wall.

THE AROUSED PANTHERS.

Notre Dame had the misfortune to encounter the Pitt team this year on a day when the Panthers were keyed to their highest pitch. The week before, Pitt had lost to Duquesne, plunging the players and their coach, Jock Sutherland, into gloom so thick that it enveloped them for several days. They came out of that dismal cloud determined that they would not lose to Notre Dame, too. They players and coach alike—felt they had to vindicate themselves. They did. They defeated Notre Dame, 26 to 0.

There was more than the will to win, important as that was, behind Pitt's showing that day, however. The line was fit and hard and functioned almost perfectly. Goldberg and Larue, a grand pair of backs, clicked. Notre Dame was peaked for that game, too. But the line petered out after a fairly good start and the backs too often were thrown out in the open for the Pitt tacklers to nail. There was ample spirit on both sides. But Pitt's was supplemented by steadier, sounder football.

This business of working a team up to a high emotional pitch for a big game can be overdone. One Big Ten coach found that out a couple of years ago when he tried to build a roaring fire under his team just before the climax game with its traditional foe. He ranted at his players for ten minutes before he led them to their dressing room, and when the players arrived there they found their uniforms trewn all over the floor and the sleeves of their jersies knotted.

"See that?" the coach roared. "That's the kind of fellows you are playing there this afternoon! Now let me see you go out there and square things with them for this insult!"

The players were mad clean thru. They were so mad they blew up at sight of the opposing team and lost the game in the first period.

CZAR ON SPOT WITH IMPORTANT CASES TO BE ANNOUNCED SOON

Critics Hardly Expect Him to Go Out Under Fire—Judge Silent.

TO MODIFY LIVELY BALL

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY.

NEW YORK. (UP). The baseball world seethed with rumors Monday while the major leagues marked time for the opening of their annual midwinter meetings Tuesday. The two leagues will meet in joint session Thursday.

The No. 1 rumor Monday was a report that Commissioner K. M. Landis, 70 year old baseball czar, was on the verge of resigning. There was more than one reason to believe that this rumor was started by enemies of the commissioner who have reason to fear decisions which Landis will make shortly.

There is evidence of animosity in more than one quarter for Landis. He recently cracked down on the Cincinnati Reds and declared two players free agents. He has the Bob Feller case in his lap with the power to rule as he wishes. He has a certain major league official's activities under observation.

As for the judge himself, he sits tight and talks of rainbow trout fishing and mashie shots dead to the pin. But there's more than one major league owner who wishes he knew what the judge was really thinking about. It's a 100-1 it isn't resigning under fire.

Desires Night Ball.

Among the important matters the club owners will discuss are:

1. Night baseball in the American league.
2. Curtailment of doubleheaders.
3. Raising the draft limit from four to five years.
4. The recent rule adopted by the minors which permits a major league club to recommend a player to a minor league club and retain the right to later acquire the player.
5. Modification of the lively ball.
6. Supervision of radio broadcasting.

In the player marts the hottest rumors, passed along for what they're worth, were:

Detroit will trade Shortstop Billy Rogell and cash to the Browns for Shortstop Lyn Lary.

Higgins to Indians?

The Athletics will trade Third Baseman Pinky Higgins to the Red Sox for Third Baseman Billy Werber and cash. Then the Red Sox will send Higgins to Cleveland for Outfielder Joe Vosmik.

The White Sox will send Pitcher John Whitehead to Cleveland for Pitcher Thorton Lee and Catcher Joe Becker.

The Cubs will get Outfielder Hank Leiber, possibly giving up Third Baseman Stanley Hack.

Washington will trade Catcher Bolton, Pitcher Whitehill and one of its outfielders, Sington, Hill or Reynolds, for a catcher.

Pittsburgh will make a last desperate effort to land Dizzy Dean from the Cardinals.

If Dean is traded the Cardinals will swing a deal with Brooklyn for Van Mungo.

DORAIS MAY SUCCEED HANSON AT SYRACUSE

Martineau Also Listed as Candidate—Thomas Lauds Louisiana State.

BY EDDIE BRIETZ.

NEW YORK. (UP). Football department: Looks like the same old setup: The Sugar bowl will have the football teams, the Orange bowl the weather and the Rose bowl the crowd.... Frank Thomas, Alabama coach (and a darned good sport) said: "We really didn't rate an invitation, but Louisiana State did."...Gus Dorias, Detroit, and Earl Martineau, Princeton, are listed Nos. 1 and 2 as probable successor to Vic Hanson at Syracuse....Colgate will borrow 12,000 bleacher seats from Syracuse for its home game with Duke next year....This will increase the seating capacity at Colgate to around 15,000....Why don't they bring the game to New York?

Round and round section: Quite appropriately, Al Corssley and Jimmy Walthour, winners of last week's insomnia derby, wore Nos. 1 and 2....Mrs. Walthour walked into the arena ten minutes before the zero hour with her fingers crossed....James Barton, star of "Tobacco Road" and a confirmed six day race fan, just couldn't miss the finish....So he dashed to the Garden from the Forrest theater, a block away, in his stage clothes and makeup....Crosley and Walthour leave Wednesday for a tour of the European tracks....

M'LEMORE

Tom Sawyer Comes Back to Life Again.

BY HENRY M'LEMORE.

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (Copyright, 1936, UP). Tom Sawyer came to life in the crowd gathered about the 18th green of the Biltmore golf course here Sunday and, right under his elders' noses, perpetrated a crime which threw the very important $10,000 open championship into a very fine discord.

At least it looked like Tom Sawyer. He was a boy of about 8, and his face was thickly freckled, his shirt was out, and his pants were worn in the approved half mast fashion of boyhood. The only discordant note was the shoes he wore, but he apologized for them by leaving the laces untied.

Victor Ghezzi, the big professional from Deal, N. J., was his victim. Ghezzi, intent on sharing the $10,000 worth of swag which is distributed to the low scorers in this, the richest of all tournaments, boldly played his second shot for the green. The ball skittered across the carpet, bounced thru a treacherous trap, and came to rest on the grass some three feet beyond the sand.

It had no more than rolled to a stop than Miami's 1936 Tom Sawyer, who was standing with his father in the crowd horseshoed about the green, minnowed thru the spectators and, with a joyous whoop, grabbed it up and disappeared in a nearby clump of hibiscus bushes.

Horror is the only word to use in describing the emotions of the spectators as the boy and the ball and the flying shirt tail disappeared in the shrubbery. They shrieked and moaned and cried for the scamp's father to set out in pursuit.

When that gentleman, who was overcome by the enormity of the crime, didn't immediately move, a posse of golf lovers was quickly formed and set out on the chase.

"The scamp should be arrested," indignantly barked an old fellow who used a putter for a cane.

"Wish he were mine," was the bitter remark of a lady whose shooting stick groaned under her weight. "I'd wear him out with a No. 2 iron."

Ghezzi Arrives.

Ghezzi, ignorant of what had happened, arrived at this time and started looking for his ball. At first no one dared tell him of the dastardly deed, but finally the old gentleman with the putter explained the situation.

Once again we must use the word horror, this time is describing Ghezzi's emotion. Unless the rascal was apprehended, he explained in a voice alive with feeling, he couldn't hole out and his chance of winning some money would be lost.

There was a shout from the vicinity of the swimming pool.

"We got him! We got him!" came the triumphant cry of the leader, a bearded fellow who only the night before had bored everybody in the locker room with the story of how he once had a par on St. Andrews famous road hole.

They marched the boy to the edge of the green and demanded he place the ball in the exact spot it was when his criminal instincts got the best of him.

Chin out, and with every freckle breathing defiance, the boy dropped the ball on the ground and kicked it into the trap, where it rolled into a deep heel print.

"It wasn't in the trap!" the horrified gallery cried in unison.

"That's where I found it and that's where I put it back," Tom replied.

General Alarm Sounded.

A general alarm for the tournament officials and their rule books was sounded.

They came scurrying. In two minutes enough golf minds to make one ordinary mind were giving off opinions worth nothing.

One red tape interpreter wanted to know the culprit's age. Another wanted the business address of his father. Still another said he thought the same rule that applied when crows flew off with golf balls would apply in this case. A colleag questioned this on the grounds, that the boy, bad as he was, was not a crow.

Finally they decided on the only thing anyone with common sense could decide. They allowed Ghezzi to drop the ball over his shoulder in the approximate spot the spectations said it landed.

Tom Sawyer, firmly held by his father, walked away meditatively rubbing the seat of his pants.

PARKER IS CREDITED WITH LONGEST SCORE

Shares With Popovich Run Of 105 Yards for Tally—Francis Lauded.

BY HERBERT BARKER.

NEW YORK. (AP). Credit Ace Parker, Duke's all America halfback, and Milton Popovich of Montana which the longest of the football season's long gains.

Parker was credited with numerous long runs during the 1936 campaign but saved his best for the objective game with North Carolina, grabbing a kickoff five yards back of his own goal and running 105 yards to a touchdown. Popovich did the same thing against Oregon State.

These were the outstanding individual scoring sprints of the campaign but an Associated Press roundup of long runs, long passes and long kicks developed scores of other sensational plays.

Byron White of Colorado university, for instance, ran 102 yards with a kickoff against Denver and Dexter Stanphil of Sewance grabbed a Florida fumble in midair on his own goal line and sprinted 100 yards to score. Bud Jangley of Southern California made a 100 yard run to tie Notre Dame Saturday after intercepting a pass.

Credit for the longest pass goes to Bert Johnson of Kentucky who passed 66 yards to Bob David against Maryville.

The longest gain reported on a forward passing play was 85 yards. Cella of New York university passed 30 yards to Millner who ran 55 yards to score against Rutgers. Ken Noble of Baldwin-Wallace passed 15 yards to Norman Schoen who ran 70 yards for a touchdown against Case. A Larue-Goldberg lateral was good for 87 yards when Pitt trounced Carnegie Tech.

Francis Mentioned.

While the emphasis ordinarily rests on the ball carriers college kickers produced some astounding feats. Larke Suber of Baldwin-Wallace was credited with one punt that covered 85 yards, 70 in the air. George Fowler of Indiana got away a boot that traveled 84 yards from the line of scrimmage against Purdue. One punt by Johnny Andrews of Western Reserve stopped 83 yards away and Sam Francis, all America fullback from Nebraska, kicked one 82 yards against Pitt. Bush Lamb of Iowa sent a punt booming 80 yards against Temple.

Field goals played a relatively small part in the football scheme of things but Tom Ferry of St. Mary's kicked two placements against Fordham, one going 46 yards. Bill Lynch of Princeton, drop-kicked specialist, booted a 46-yard field goal against Rutgers.

Among outstanding long runs reported were:

Ray Rapers, Mississippi, 98 yards with a punt return, against Union university.

Sampson, George Washington, 98 yards with a kick, against Catawba.

Ed Armbrust, Davidson, 95 yards with a kickoff against Furman.

Sam Francis, Nebraska, 85 yards against Pittsburgh.

Joe Mayers, Baylor, 95 yards against Oklahoma City.

Harrison, Penn State, 91 yards against Penn.

Hitch Wilde, Texas, 93 yards against Missouri.

Fritz Tetsch, St. Louis, 92 yards against Grinnell.

Charlton, Oklahoma, 91 yards against West Virginia.

Mosier, Louisiana, 90 yards against Auburn.

Al Fracnak, Virginia Military, 90 yards against South Carolina.

Jack Wade, Wabash, 88 yards against Hanover.

Lacey Baker, Minnesota, 87 yards against Texas.

Joe Kilgore, Alabama, 83 yards to beat Mississippi State.

Al Agee, Michigan State, 82 yards against Michigan.

Jack Cassiano, Arkansas State, 82 yards against Arkansas.

Andy Cavin, Muskingum, 78 yards after he intercepted Tom Wilkinson to beat Nebraska.

Joe Lesko, Fordham, 76 yards with intercepted pass to beat Columbia.

Ray Graham, Loyola, 75 yards with punt return to beat Detroit.

George Matisi, Duquesne, 72 yards to beat Pitt.

GULDAHL HOLD SLEAD BILTMORE GOLF MEET

Has 207 Total for a Six Stroke Lead—Shoots a 69 Sunday.

BY HENRY M'LEMORE.

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (UP). The man is an automobile salesman, looks like a banker with his smartly conservative clothes and graceful bay window, and plays golf as tho he had an understanding with Providence.

His name is Guldahl -Ralph Guldahl—and he was so far out in front of the field as it moved into the final round of the Miami Biltmore open championship Monday that his rivals were praying for miracles but expecting second money.

Guldahl shot his third successive sub-par round Sunday for a 54 hole total of 207 and a lead of 6 strokes over his nearest rival. Guldahl opened with a 70 on Friday, followed with a 68 on Saturday, and come in Sunday with a 69, despite a blustery wind which had nearly everybody else yelling for help.

Closest to him was Lawson Little, the burly boy who not so long ago ruled the amateurs. Little spun a magnificent 66 on Saturday to challenge for the lead, but Sunday the best he could do was 73 for 213. One stroke behind, at 214, were Horton Smith, Denny Shute, Henry Picard and Jimmy Demaret. Smith started the third round as the leader, but the wind and the pressure shot him down and he had a terrible time and a terrible 77.

Grouped at 215 were Gene Sarazen and Mike Turnesa. Sarazen was just three strokes behind Guldahl after three rounds, but the putts wouldn't drop for him and he took ka 74. Bracketed at 216, and with only the proverbial Chinaman's chance, were Ed Dudley, Harold "Jug" McSpaden, O. Watrous, Johnny Revolta, twice runnerup in this tournament, and Jimmy Hines.

Behind them but why embarrass them?

MAHONEY IS ELECTED TO A.A.U. PRESIDENCY IN HOT FACTION DUEL

Victory Over Patrick Walsh Quells Influence of Avery Brundage. DISCARD 'HARMONY' PLAN

BY ALAN GOULD.

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP). The bitterest fight in more then a decade for the presidency of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States ended Sunday with a decisive victory for Jeremiah Titus Mahoney, former New York supreme court justice and 1934 chief executive of the A. A. U., over his metropolitan antagonist and the administration's standard bearer, Maj. Patrick J. Walsh.

Altho forecast ever since the convention delegates gathered to renew the verbal battle where they left off a year ago in warfare over the Olympics, the triumphant comeback to power of the Mahoney forces was achieved only after the pre-meeting "harmony program" had been dumped into the discard and delegates whipped to a high pitch of factional animosity.

The final vote within the board of governors, into which the convention constituted itself to decide all major issues, was 199 3-7 for Mahoney and 127 4-7 for Walsh.

Victory for Boycotters.

The socalled "allied bodies," whose support enabled Brundage to carry the pro-Olympic fight a year ago, were not so prominently in attendance but their vote showed continued support of the retiring chief executive, by a 6 to 4 margin for Walsh.

The outcome was simultaneously a victory for the A. A. U. forces which favored the Olympic boycott last year and a setback for Brundage, whose joint presidency of the American Olympic committee and the A. A. U. had made him the target of gathering opposition since the 1935 convention.

Any doubt about the significance of the outcome, insofar as leadership in American athletics and its policies are concerned, was promptly removed by Mahoney, who joined the Olympic boycott drive on anti-nazi grounds a year ago and sharply criticized many steps taken by the American athletic forces under Brundage's regime.

One of Mahoney's first acts was to include Comm. Ernest Lee Jahncke of New Orleans among delegates at large to the A. A. U. for 1937. Commodore Jahncke, opposed to holding the Olympics in Germany, was dropped from membership on the international Olympic committee at the meeting in Berlin which elected Brundage to fill the southerner's place.

Mahoney had characterized the dropping of Jahncke by the I. C. C. as an "outrage," contending that it was done because of the commodore's anti-nazi expressions and not, as announced, because of his non-attendance at meetings.

Awards of the National A. A. U. championship competitions for 1937 were ratified as follows:

Basketball (men), Denver, March 19-20; basketball (women), Wichita, Kas., March 22-28. Boxing-ding. All events to Lake Placid, N. Y. Boxing (senior)—Boston, early in April; junior—St. Louis. Collegiate indoor—Chicago, April; outdoor—St. Louis, May 29.

LARDNER SAYS SUGAR S IBEST BOWL GAME

Football Is Daffy Anyway, But Huskies Pulled Prize Boner of All.

By JOHN LARDNER.

Copyrighted by NANA (The Lincoln Journal and other newspapers).

NEW YORK. In a comical world where the Rose Bowl game is played in the Sugar Bowl and the runnerup for the city championship of Pittsburgh plays a tied and beaten team in the Rose Bowl well, in a world like that, Dizzy Dean may well be sold to the Phillies for the waiver price.

But probably he won't be. Baseball people are much more frosty and level headed than football people.

And of all football people, the Rose Bowl people are the daffiest. I think you are giving them the best of it when you refer to their mental processes as peculiar. They have kicked the socalled "national championship" game right out of their own garden into the back yard of the river metropolis of New Orleans. Maybe they never wanted it.

The Sugar Bowl game is the big bowl game this year. It will remain so even if Santa Clara is licked in the meanwhile by Texas Christian, because Santa Clara will still have a better season's record than Washington, and Louisiana will have a better record than Pittsburgh. Maybe the Rose Bowl folks will straighten themselves out by 1938, but until then (the word is Sugar.

RESULTS LAST WEEK.

Kansas 30, Washburn 26.
Iowa State 37, Central 30.

KANSAS CITY. (AP). Two Big Six basketball teams Sunday were checking hits and errors of opening nonconference games and before another week passes the four other loop quintets will have an inkling of whether this will be their season or just another winter.

Kansas and Iowa State started their campaigns last week and each won, altho there was some doubt for a time that the champion Jayhawks would emerge on the profit side. Kansas defeated a good Washburn team, 30 to 26 and Iowa State defeated an equally tough Central college quintet, 37 to 30.

Considering they lost three-fifths of last season's regulars by graduation, Dr. F. C. "Phog" Allen's Jayhawks performed right well. Their chief weakness was inability to hit the basket, which, after all, is akin to saying they talked very clearly, only you couldn't understand them. They missed the object of the game.

In Roy Holliday, a junior, Allen has a bobbing, weaving "quarterback" who looms as a worthy successor to Milton Allen, and George Golay, 6 foot 3 inch forward from Warrensburg, Mo., he has a rugged speciman slated for a regular berth.

Burton Thomson and Captain Jack Flemming were the big guns in the Iowa State bombardment, between them accounting for 23 points. The game was a typical opener, ragged as a bread line, but indicated Coach Louis Menze might be unduly conservative in terming his Iowa State entry "just fair."

NEBRASKA COLLEGES MAY FORM NEW LOOP

McCrady Sees End of Old Conference—York Will Not Play Tigers.

HASTINGS. (AP). Refusal of York college to schedule football games with Hastings college was seen here Monday as a step toward the dissolution of the Nebraska collegiate athletic conference, organization of denominational schools of the state.

Coach Neal Gallant of York told conference officials at the annual meeting at Lincoln Saturday that York could no longer cope with Hastings teams on the gridiron. Hastings beat York 45-0 in 1935 and 42-0 in 1936.

"We have known before every game with Hastings that we were in for a good licking," Gallant told conference heads.

Gallant made it clear that it was merely a question of being outmanned in football and that no question of sports ethics was involved. Hastings and York will compete together in basketball and track this season.

Coach Thurlo McCrady of Hastings Monday preceded the end of the conference that has existed since 1928.

He pointed out that refusal of York to play Hastings leaves both schools technically eliminated from championship consideration on a percent basis.

There has been talk of late of a merger of the larger schools of the church college conference with the normal schools at Kearney, Peru and Wayne.

PRO GRID COACHES CALL FRANCIS BEST BACK OF '36 SEASON

Every Tutor Polled Would Like to Have Sam on His Ball Club.

PICK OWN ALL-AMERICAN

NEW YORK. The shrewdest of all judges of football talent on the hoof are the coaches and scouts of professional football teams the men who study and appraise college stars from a strictly practical point of view, unswayed by headlines or tradition, weighing the candidates by every possible standard of football measurement, paying attention to nothing but solid worth and ability.

The pro men cannot afford to make mistakes—not often, anyway. Your average All America picker has nothing to lose by guessing wrong, but the pro coach puts his business career at stake whenever he approves and bids for a college player. Nobody scans those cabbages on the grocer's counter more closely than the guy who is going to buy one.

Their All Americans.

This year, with the cash football industry coming along fast and competition for the college product growing keener by the minute, the boys missed very few tricks. Here is the pro man's idea of the All America college team for 1936, based on a poll of coaches in the National professional league taken by the North American Newspaper alliance:

End, Tinsley, Louisiana State.
Tackle, Wildseth, Minnesota.
Guard, Starcevich, Washington.
Center, Basrak, Duquesne.
Guard, Bassi, Santa Clara.
Tackle, Daniel, Pittsburgh.
End, Wendt, Ohio State.
Quarterback, Baugh, Texas Christian.
Halfback, Buivid, Marquette.
Halfback, Falaschi, Santa Clara.
Fullback, Francis, Nebraska.

Of course, the coaches are by no means unanimous in their selections. Some of them have different ideas of what they want in a football player. Some have scouted one section of the country more thoroly than others. And besides, All America teams are a dime a dozen in the pro man's book. He is looking for actual value, not newspaper clippings.

Orchids for Sam.

Let's see what the professional fellows think of this year's college crop, generally and individually.

In their judgment, Sam Francis, Nebraska's fast, pile driving fullback, is the outstanding back of the year. Every coach in the poll would like to have Francis on his ball club.

The pro men are divided on the subject of Larry Kelley, the season's most publicized performer. George Halas, of the Chicago Bears, and Joe Bach, of the Pittsburgh Panthers, rate the Yale captain as an All American end. Most of the others are noncommittal, but Bert Bell, of the Philadelphia Eagles, says specifically that he would not be interested in Kelley.

Next to Francis, the most thoroly indorsed of the college players are Gay Tinsley, Louisiana's end, and Mike Basrak, the big center from Duquesne.

HUSKER ALL-UNIVERSITY MAT TOURNEY TUESDAY

Approximately 50 wrestlers are expected to compete in Jerry Adam's annual all-university mat tourney Tuesday at 4 p. m. in the coliseum. The tournament is open to the public, and high school gridders attending the all-state football rally, and the junior chamber of commerce will be guests.

Among the Husker gridders expected to compete are Eddie Sauer, Jack Hutcherson, Perry Franks and Lowell English. Charley Brock had planned to participate, but an injured elbow may prevent him. George Seeman, former state prep heavyweight champion, will also be kept out with an injury. Jerry holds the tournament as an annual "feeler" for varsity material. The Big Six conference wrestling championships will be held in Lincoln this year.

Men start planning now to save the little woman a continuous Christmas by having the wash sent regularly to the Evans Laundry. B3961. Adv.

NEW YORK. (AP). The stock market had plenty of good industrial news to chew on Monday, but it failed to work up an appetite except for an assortment of specialties, principally in the low price category.

While a few favorites had chalked up gains of fractions to around 3 points near the fourth hour, most of the so-called leaders were either unchanged or down moderately. The activity dragged after a fairly brisk opening.

Weakening of prices in both the London and Paris markets drew further attention to complicated European matters with the result traders, on the whole, exhibited a warier attitude toward the buying side.

Shares managing to push ahead included Manati Sugar common and preferred, Texas Gulf Producing, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Paramount, Warner Bros., Loews, Dome Mines, Utilities Power & Light, Standard Oil of N. J., International Paper Power "C", International Hydro-Electric, Texas Corp., Westinghouse and Goodyear.

In the backward division were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, Safeway Stores, American Can, General Electric, Consolidated Edison, North American, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Anaconda, Kennecott, U. S. Smeling, Standard Oil of Indiana and Ohio Oil.

Those inclined to the buying side for the "pull" were looking forward with hope to an acceleration of trade momentum in the spring. It was admitted, tho, that the tide of extra and special dividends has pretty well spent its force as a market motivator.

The fact rails been comparatively neglected in the past several weeks was explained by some analysts, in that of the problems yet to be solved, the campaign to shorten working hours and the realization much of the excess revenues now piling up for the important roads will have to be put into delayed rejuvenation of equipment and maintenance of way.

While earnings figures of the aircraft manufacturers thus far have not been particularly striking, observers in this department were forecasting a substantial expansion in contracts from both governments and passenger transport lines in the early months of 1937.

Recent liveliness of the petroleum shares brought opinions from the financial sector the major oil companies have attained the best statistical position they have enjoyed in the past several years. Corporations with large crude reserves have been especially favored.

With the heaviest railroad orders in many years pushing many steel mills to the limit, the magazine "Steel" said the industry is now confronted with the problem of producing tonnage already on the books before Jan. 1, when higher prices go into effect.

National output, it was said, shows no sign of slackening during December. While demand from the automobile field was not so pronounced last week, largely because of strikes in parts plants, settlement of some of the major labor difficulties was expected to bring a pickup in buying from this source.

It was not overlooked that R. L. Polk & Co., estimated new passenger car sales in November at 225,000 units against 171,318 in October and 220,262 in December, 1935. Sterling, at the start of foreign exchange transactions, was off ¾ of a cent at $4.89⅜, and the French franc was unchanged at 4.65¼ cents.

Foreign Markets at a Glance.

LONDON. (AP). Gilt edged securities and industrials suffered the greatest losses in Monday's weak stock market. Trading was on a small scale. Oil and rubber issues were fairly active and strong in the early dealings but reacted with the remainder of the list. Trans-Atlantic shares finished lower while the mining section was quiet and about unchanged.

PARIS. The bourse closed generally heavy with railroad shares mixed and rentes declining from 30 to 55 centimes. Coal stocks sold lower while Rentes Perpetuelle finished the day with a 25 francs gain. Bank of France stock lost 50 francs.

LIVERPOOL.—Wheat futures were firm and about a penny higher at the close. Italy was a purchaser of Manitoba and Argentine grain and rains were reported in the harvest sections of Argentine. Moderate selling of cash futures was absorbed by short covering and investment buying of distant positions. Prices were 1 point lower to 1 higher.

LATE UPTURN IN CORN AIDS OTHER CEREALS

Close Is 3-4 to 1 3-4 Cents Higher and Wheat Is 7-8 to 1 1-4 Up.

CHICAGO. (AP). About 2 cents a bushel late jump of corn values did much to put backbone into all grains at the last. Cold weather and dearth of to arrive offerings of corn was largely responsible for corn strength, which lifted oats, rye and soy beans to new high price records for the season.

An authoritative unofficial estimate put Argentina's wheat yield at bu 215,000,000 bushels, against recen forecasts of 216,000,000 bushels.

Corn closed strong ¾ to 1¾ above Saturday's finish, December 1.09@1.09⅛. May new 1.04⅛@1.04⅜. Wheat ⅞ to 1¼ up, December 1.25⅞, May 1.21⅞@1.22. Oats ¾ to 1 cent advanced, and provisions unchanged to a bulge of 25 cents.

Significance in this connection was attached to advices to unabated European demand, with Italy again buyers of wheat from Canada and from Argentina. Bulls stressed also that widespread sudden drop of domestic temperatures appeared to offset the market effects at recent further moisture. It was asserted, too, that the discount of United States new crop wheat futures under Liverpool should bring about continued buying support of the market here.

Enlarged selling, however, developed on Chicago price advances of around 1c to 1¼c for wheat, and reactions at times carried the entire market to below Saturday's finish. Late setbacks of Liverpool quotations had an unsettling effect at this time, the Liverpool market closing irregular at one cent decline to ⅛c gain after showing early a rise of 1½c. It was pointed out by bears that in the last month Chicago wheat futures had advanced 21½@13½c, with only two reactions of importance.

Corn, oats and rye displayed more sustained firmness than wheat. Reports were current that much Argentine corn waiting to be unloaded at United States Pacific ports is deteriorating in condition. Provisions reflected upturns of hog values.

LIVESTOCK

CHICAGO. (AP). Hog prices advanced 15 to 25 cents, stimulated by reduction of receipts as a result of cold weather and higher wholesale pork quotations. Top rose to $10.30, highest in two months as some sales showed a gain of more than 25 cents.

Receipts fell to 26,000, a drop of 9,000 below advance estimates and 23,000 below offerings a week ago. While this resulted in an active demand from all buying interests, livestock men said ½ cent higher quotations in the wholesale pork loin market indicated the basic strength of the hog trade. Loins were quoted at 16 to 18½ cents per pound.

Cold weather cut into receipts in other branches of the trade and brought higher prices. Traders said the weather also might be depended upon to stimulate meat consumption to some extent.

In a strong to 25 cents higher cattle market, choice long yearlings topped at $12.75. The highest price paid for commercial heeves here in ten months. Shortfeds were more numerous in the cattle run but these shared in the strength according to good and choice offerings. There was no change in wholesale beef carcass prices.

Lambs and sheep had a steady opening but the market dupplexed an upward tendency. The early top for choice natives was $9, up a dime from last week's closing peak.

MRS. SEWELL WEDS AGAIN

Husband Trader Now Tries Orchestra Singer

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Oct. 6.—Mrs. Leah Clan pitt Sewell once named in a love quadrangle in which the other woman told of exchanging mates for the night at a beach party was on a honeymoon with her fourth husband.

The divorced wife of the wealthy California sportsman Barton Sewell, he later married the other woman—was wedded here Sunday night after an airplane elopement from Palm Springs, Calif., to Charles Kaley, singer and orchestra leader. Mrs. Sewell's previous three marriages and Kaley's previous one ended in the divorce courts.

Mrs. Sewell denied any misconduct in the love quadrangle which also involved Sewell, Walter W. Emerson, author-writer, and Mrs. Emerson and which resulted in a snarl of law suits, sensational charges and flat lights.

Mrs. Sewell also was charged with being indicted at a hotel with Buster Keaton, film comedian, by Mrs. Mae Elizabeth Keaton who sued him for divorce. She filed an action against Mrs. Sewell but the charges later were dropped.

Mrs. Emerson, mother of Emerson's three children, testified at the trial of her husband's divorce suit in which Sewell was named corespondent, that the exchange of husbands occurred at a party in Ocean Beach, Calif., in November, 1934.

TARZAN AND THE MAYAN GODDESS—BY EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS.

As the sacrificial dagger plunged toward Tarzan's heart, the monsters grunted and shrieked with delight. The victim's friends covered their eyes to blot out the horrible sight, but the ape-man gazed steadily up at the furious Queen Zalya without moving a muscle

Tarzan looked death in the face, and was not afraid. A thousand times in his dangerous career he had pitted his strength and cunning against the shadowy specter—and won. He could not now begrudge a victory of which he had so often cheated his ever present foe

But halfway to its lethal goal, Queen Zalya brought the dagger to a sharp halt. The blade fell from her hand and clattered to the floor. Then she threw her arms across the prostrate form of the ape-man and sobbed "I can't do it! I—I can't kill him!"

A gasp of astonishment and disappointment rose from the ranks of the monsters. The medicine priest seized a club and advanced toward the queen, his face writhing with hostility. "Kill the captive, as the law prescribes, or I, Togatzal, will kill both of you!"
